RAINEY, HOUSE SPEAKER, DIES

FRUITS OF NEW DEAL MONETARY POLICIES BITTER

Nearly 2 Billions of Credit Idle.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—The fruits of the monetary policies of the New Dealers are now appearing, and they are not sweet fruits.

Two major deficiencies appear to the financial situation, to the peril of the New Deal program. First is that the dam holding back billions of commercial credit has not been broken down despite persistent battering by the New Dealers. The federal reserve board reported today that 1 billion 950 millions of credit still lies idle in banks.

Second is that confidence in the government's own securities has shown a faltering tendency in the last fortnight, an ill omen for the gigantic financing programs upon which the entire fate of the New Deal depends.

Few U. S. Loans Made.

On the first difficulty it has been shown this week that even though the federal reserve banks and the Reconstruction Finance corporation both were authorized by congress to make loans direct to private industries, this has not served to loosen more than a trifling aggregate of loans.

Upward of half a billion dollars of loans were expected to be made by the two government agencies under the authority granted at the last session of congress.

It was freely charged by the New Dealers that the bankers of the country, for selfish reasons, were refusing to make credit available for the expansion of industry under the New Deal. Bankers were represented as holding on to their funds, refusing to advance them on perfectly sound commercial risks, spurning gilt-edge security.

But for three months now both the federal reserve banks and the RFC, under the direct thumb of the New Dealers, have had free rein to lend money to industries. The results appear to have vindicated the bankers, for in the case of the federal reserve banks a total of only 204 loans made in this classification up to Aug. 15 amounted to only $214,000. The federal reserve banks have 250 millions for this purpose.

RFC Lends But 7 Millions.

At the same time Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, admitted under questioning that the corporation has made only 94 direct loans to industry amounting to 7 million dollars. The RFC has 300 millions allocated for this type of loans.

Mr. Jones conceded that the small number of loans was due largely to the fact that applicants have been unable to qualify. It was learned that thousands of applications are on file from would-be borrowers who have been unable to produce adequate security for loans from commercial banks.

Good borrowers, with adequate securities, are apparently unwilling to risk their resources because of their dubiousness or fear of the consequences of the New Deal experimentalism.

The loans in the federal reserve banks, totaling $214,000 on Aug. 15, had been only $28,000 the week before and $5,000 the week before that. Some saw encouragement in the progress being made, but to most intelligent observers the rate of lending is almost negligible.

Reserve Funds Set Records.

The reserve funds of the federal reserve member banks are establishing new all time records every week of late. Last week 5 million dollars was added to the reserves, bringing them to a total of four billion 64 million dollars. The excess of reserves—walled up credit—is approximately 1 billion 950 million dollars.

Most of the total amount of industrial loans granted by the federal reserve banks were by the bank at Chicago, which granted $101,000. In the seat of finance, New York, the federal reserve bank has lent only $20,000 direct to industry. Other districts making loans were Philadelphia, $37,000; Atlanta, $35,000; St. Louis, $2,000; Minneapolis, $13,000; Kansas City, $3,000, and Dallas, $3,000.

The weakness of federal bonds in the open markets came almost simultaneously with several untoward developments tending to unsettle financial stability. One was the new silver policy with its inflationary possibilities.

Now Issuing Silver Notes.

Germany Backs Hitler by 10 to 1

GRANTED ALL POWERS HELD BY HINDENBURG

Total of Noes Higher Than in November.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

BERLIN, Aug. 20 [Monday].—Chancellor Adolf Hitler is the supreme master of Germany with the approval of 38,279,514 German men and women, who appear glad to see themselves as his subjects or accept him because there is no other leader in present day Germany. Altogether 4,287,808 wrote "no" on their plebiscite ballots, trusting the promise of Hitler's officers that the secrecy of the ballot would be assured. There were 871,056 invalid votes.

Out of Germany's total electorate of 45,900,000 there were 43,438,378 who went to the polls yesterday, or 95 per cent, according to the official provisional results, which were announced at 1 a. m.

Discards Presidency.

The ballot contained a copy of the letter from Hitler to Wilhelm Frick, minister of the interior, on Aug. 3, outlining his desire to have the functions without the title of the president and the discontinuance of that office. Then there was a copy of the cabinet's law ordering the plebiscite, below which was the question:

"Do you, German man, and you, German woman, agree to the regulations provided by this law?"

There were spaces to mark "ja" and "nein."

Although the number of votes cast for Hitler was lower than the 40,500,000 sanctioning his withdrawal from the league of nations in the plebiscite last November, yesterday's vote of approval is bigger than any figure for the election of a chief of state in the history of the country.

The number of persons who dared to voice opposition, who numbered 2,052,000 last November, had more than doubled in eight months—9.3 per cent against 4.8 per cent. The "Yes" vote amounted to only 88.2 per cent of the total this time as compared with 95 per cent last November. The invalid ballots were 2 per cent, against .2 of 1 per cent previously.

Hitler and his lieutenants spent the whole evening after a rainstorm subsided acknowledging the plaudits of the masses. Standing at a window of the chancellery, where a year and a half ago he shared the ovations of his followers with the late President Paul von Hindenburg, Hitler stood alone, accepting the enthusiastic tributes of nearly 100,000 who braved the shower to march through the Tiergarten to cheer "Der Fuehrer" on this historical evening. The weather had been sunny and fair all day for the voting.

Crowds, including many women and whole classes of schoolgirls led by their teachers, packed the square and for hours on end cried out their "Sieg Heil," the victory hail, for Hitler. With searchlights playing on him, Hitler again and again waved a greeting to the masses, while a band of the Storm Troopers playing marching songs and Storm Troopers ten abreast carrying flaming torches paraded past.

Political circles expect Hitler in a few days to issue a proclamation to his people. Then he will go into retirement, probably in Bavaria, and prepare for the party caucus in Nuremberg in early September.

Opposition in Cities.

It was noted that the number of votes against Hitler in the plebiscite was biggest in the cities. The small towns and the countryside, where the farmers have benefited by Hitler's farm subventions and protective laws, voted for him.

Most of the "noes" came from the Catholic industrial labor districts of west Germany. Other "noes" came from old liberals and communists. Protestant East Prussia returned only 4 per cent of "noes." In Neudeck, the village of the Hindenburg family, all 96 inhabitants entitled to vote voted for Hitler. These included all the servants of the Hindenburg household.

In the cities like Cologne, Aix-la-Chapelle, Duesseldorf, and Hanover, between 18 and 30 per cent of the voters turned against Hitler. At Aix-la-Chapelle, the old capital of Charlemagne, which is the center of the big woolen spinning and weaving mills nowadays, 29,000 voted against Hitler

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 19.—(AP)—The Constitution says that Al Capone was among 43 prisoners transferred today from the federal penitentiary here to the government's new Alcatraz Island prison in San Francisco bay.

The transfer was made three days ahead of schedule because of the discovery of files in the cells of some of the prisoners selected for removal.

In the special car attached to a regular passenger train leaving here at 8:10 a. m. were 10 prisoners who arrived last night from Pennsylvania en route to the new prison to which the government has announced its most notorious prisoners will be sent.

Serves in Shoe Shop.

Capone, former Chicago gang chieftain, has been doing a turn in the prison shoe shop to which he was assigned upon entering the prison three years ago to serve 11 years for income tax evasion.

Last midnight two passenger coaches were shunted onto the federal penitentiary siding and a few minutes later the guards began marching the prisoners, one by one, from their cells to the cars.

The only prisoners whose names were learned besides Capone were Frisco Eddie O'Brien, Eddie Colson, and Alvin Crip. O'Brien and Colson were identified as notorious train robbers and Crip was said to be a former Chicago gunman and a bitter enemy of Capone before they were sent to the penitentiary.

Keep Convicts in Ignorance.

Working silently and under cover of darkness, the guards took every precaution to keep the news of the transfer from other prisoners, and it was presumed the 43 selected were not aware of the fact until they were tapped on the shoulder and told to dress.

Each prisoner was awakened separately, marched through the darkened cell blocks and escorted from the prison door to the cars by four guards. In the coaches they were assigned immediately to quarters for the trip across the continent to the "Devil's Island" of the United States, from which escape is considered impossible.

Convicts at New Orleans.

New Orleans, La., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Two heavily guarded railroad coaches carrying two score or more prisoners from the federal penitentiary at Atlanta passed through here late today headed for Alcatraz Island.

A picked squad of government agents armed with automatic shotguns guarded the two specially constructed steel barred coaches.

No one was allowed near the cars as they stood for ten minutes shunted off to a siding in the Louisville and Nashville yards waiting to be ferried across the Mississippi river.

Bystanders were able to get within hailing distance.

Says Al's Among Them.

"Is Al Capone in there?" one called out.

Unable to distinguish the prisoner because of the poor light, the bystander called out again:

"Is that you, Al?"

"Al," or whoever it was, grinned back, but ducked out of sight when a camera was aimed at him.

"Of course he hasn't," exclaimed the official. Checking himself, he added hurriedly: "That is, if he was on here he'd be treated just like the rest of them."

SUFFERS HEART ATTACK WHILE ILL IN HOSPITAL

Ends Long Career in Congress.

Byrns to Succeed

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, Democratic leader of the house, probably will be the next speaker. Rainey was elected speaker and Byrns leader in 1933 on a liberal platform in the party caucus. The outcome of the election of the next speaker next January will depend upon the results of the November elections, in which a new house will be chosen. [Details on page 2.]

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Henry T. Rainey, beloved speaker of the house of representatives, died unexpectedly in De Paul hospital here tonight.

The picturesque, white haired speaker, who had been ill for two weeks of bronchial pneumonia, would have been 74 years old tomorrow.

Mr. Rainey died quietly at 7:50 p. m., three hours after Mrs. Rainey, happy over the apparent marked improvement in the condition of her husband, had left the hospital after spending the afternoon with him. Three physicians, hurriedly summoned, and a hospital supervisor were with the speaker when he died.

Native of Carrollton.

Dr. H. W. Soper, in charge of the physicians attending Mr. Rainey, said he developed angina pectoris and died before medical science could aid him.

A native of Carrollton, Ill., his home throughout his life, Mr. Rainey first was elected to congress from the 20th Illinois district in 1902. Except for the Harding landslide of 1920, when he was defeated, although running ahead of the Democratic ticket, Mr. Rainey was returned in each biannual election.

Long a colorful and influential figure in the house, he was elected to the speakership after John Nance Garner of Texas had been elected to the Vice Presidency in the 1932 election.

Conscious Until Near End.

Mr. Rainey was conscious until the time of his death, Dr. Soper said. Throughout the day he seemed in the best of spirits, especially while chatting pleasantly with his wife and her sister, a Mrs. Williams.

Suddenly, tonight, Mr. Rainey called for a hospital attendant on his floor. She summoned three physicians, including Dr. Soper, but the speaker succumbed before they could administer aid.

The angina pectoris attack, Dr. Soper said, was so sudden they could do nothing to prolong Mr. Rainey's life.

Complications developed after the speaker had suffered an attack of bronchial pneumonia at his home in Carrollton two weeks ago and he was brought to the hospital here. For the last several days his condition showed improvement and today was regarded by his physicians as his best day.

SPEAKER AT 72.

Mr. Rainey reached the powerful post of speaker of the house after service in fourteen congresses. He was a white haired veteran of 72 when he was handed the gavel at the start of his fifteenth term in March, 1933.

He started his congressional service in 1903 and thereafter kept the Twentieth Illinois district in the Democratic column except in the Sixty-seventh congress, when he was a victim of the Harding Republican landslide of November, 1920.

As speaker he was faced at the outset with the extraordinary series of legislative acts which marked the opening months of the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration. The national bank holiday, return of beer, the amendment to abolish the eighteenth amendment, the granting of powers to the President to slash government expenditures, the abandonment of the gold standard, currency inflation, farm relief, and a huge program of public works to relieve unemployment came in rapid succession.

Keeps Them in Line.

So expeditiously did the national legislature push through the acts connected with these developments that some of the representatives began to murmur about "rubber stamp legislation," but Rainey gently, and yet firmly, kept them in line.

He was a big man physically. Towering over most of his colleagues, his wide shoulders were topped by a neck like that of a circus strong man and a massive head crowned with a mane

Tell How They Were Lost in Stratosphere

MARIBOR, Jugo-Slavia, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Turning aside tonight from his labors of loading the dismantled stratosphere balloon on trucks borrowed from the Jugo-Slav government, Max Cosyns, the Belgian scientist, explained events which led the world to believe he and his co-navigator, Neree Vanderlist, were dead, while they floated high in the sky.

He said he had sent out many radio messages announcing the balloon's progress but that these were killed by interference from Austrian and German wireless stations.

The balloon, once used by Prof. Auguste Piccard for record ascensions, rose from Hour-Havenne, near Brussels, yesterday morning. Cosyns and Vanderlist ascended to 16,000 meters (52,493 feet), far short of the record, but Cosyns declared the purpose was to gather scientific data and not to reach a record height.

Carried 1,100 Miles.

The huge balloon landed about dusk in a cornfield near Zinovije, which is between Varazdin and the Austrian border. The balloon came down gently and all of the delicate scientific instruments which they had taken aloft at Hour-Havenne, 1,100 miles away in Belgium, were intact.

Two scrambled eggs and one piece of bread was the only food the two scientists had during their sky voyage. Asked what he had left after they landed, Cosyns said, "Nothing—O yes, aspirin."

Both aeronauts had a high fever and were suffering from acute nervous exhaustion. As soon as peasants had pulled the balloon down by means of ropes thrown from the gondola the two balloonists fell flat on the ground from sheer weakness.

"It was an ordeal even to walk to the schoolmaster's house, ten minutes distant, where we spent the night," said Cosyns.

Must Study Results.

The Belgian said he could have continued flying another 20 hours or more, but nothing would have been gained by it. He said he will announce the scientific results of the flight only after months of careful study, explaining that the scientific instruments and records must be checked by a competent commission. He intends to start immediately on a vacation.

Surrounded by crowds of peasants here, Cosyns said one of the charms of the stratosphere was its lack of clouds. He said as soon as they reached the upper region they encountered a 70 mile gale.

The popular notion of the stratosphere as an area of calm is erroneous, Cosyns said. Winds, however, would not interfere with navigating in the stratosphere, for airplanes could go much faster than the speed of the wind.

Some of the wagons lent to Cosyns to haul his balloon to the railway station for shipment back to Belgium were furnished by a former Chicagoan, Steve Balick.

2½ YEAR OLD BOY SHOT IN HEAD BY MYSTERY GUNMAN

Robert Pitts Jr., 2½ years old, 1561 East 93d street, was shot and possibly fatally wounded by an unidentified gunman at 90th street and Stony Island avenue last night. The boy, struck in the head, was taken to the South Chicago hospital.

His father, Robert Sr., and his mother started for a stroll with little Robert and his year old brother, Donald. The youngsters were sitting in a toy wagon pulled by their father. He heard a shot just as an automobile passed and, turning, saw that his son had been hurt.

The South Chicago police could find no motive for the shooting. Pitts is a former janitor, but is now unemployed.

Hollywood Composer Is Shot to Death

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 19.—Jerry Jarnegin, composer and husband of Irene Franklin, musical comedy actress, was shot and killed at his pretentious home here tonight. Police said they were not able to determine immediately whether he had been slain or had taken his own life.

The tragedy interrupted a dinner party just as it began. Miss Franklin told officers she and three guests had seated themselves at dinner and she had called to her husband to join them when a shot rang out in the living room.

Bullet in Right Temple.

Miss Franklin said she hurried in from the dining room and found her husband lying on the floor, a bullet wound in his right temple. She summoned a physician and an ambulance, but Jarnegin died almost instantly.

When police arrived they found a .38 caliber pistol in a chair about six feet from the body. Persons in the house could not remember whether they had picked up the weapon and moved it, but each said he did not think he had touched it.

Detectives were examining the pistol for finger prints. An autopsy was ordered to determine whether powder burns surrounded the wound.

Miss Franklin said the weapon belonged to her husband and he had kept it under his pillow on their bed. Detectives observed, they said, that the pillow apparently had not been disturbed. Detective Capt. Bart Wallis said he was convinced Jarnegin killed himself, but ordered a thorough investigation.

Guests Are at Dinner.

The guests were Miss Franklin's niece, Miss Dorothy Watson of Lake Charles, La., who had been visiting them since June; her fiancé, William Green, who had arrived today from Lake Charles, and Mrs. Walter Klein, an old friend of the family.

They said Jarnegin had appeared in the best of spirits and was quite jovial.

Some three weeks ago the Jarnegins were in Municipal court appearing against Lawrence Thomas, their former house boy, whom they charged with felonious assault. They alleged the boy beat them both after he had been discharged and broke up furniture. Thomas was held for Superior court trial and his hearing set for Aug. 27. Jarnegin was the principal witness against the youth, who was freed on bail.

of silvery hair that stuck out in all directions from his silk hat on formal occasions. His square jaws held a big black pipe rigidly, but when he spoke his tones were soft and amiable.

Rainey represented a farming district in territory once contested politically by Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas and was a farmer himself. He had one of the show places of the fertile Illinois river valley near Carrollton, where he was born Aug. 20, 1860, and where he lived all his life.

Farming a Public Cause.

Farming was not only a personal hobby with him but a public cause as well. He dedicated much of his service in Washington to efforts to improve agricultural conditions, holding that farm prosperity was imperative in any program for national well being.

He was a student and critic of tariff and fiscal subjects and jumped into the national spotlight with a spectacular attack upon the Payne-Aldrich tariff which developed into a general Democratic fight on the administration.

KNOWN AS 'REGULAR'

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—Speaker Henry T. Rainey is remembered in official Washington as a "regular" from the days of Bryan and free silver to Roosevelt and the New Deal.

For more than a decade and a half his stock figure—given a touch of flamboyance during the later days by his shock of snow white hair and his flowing black bow tie—has been a familiar sight on the floor of congress.

Since 1903, with but a single break caused by the Republican landslide in 1920, he has sat as representative from the 20th Illinois district.

Rose in Seniority.

Steadily he rose in seniority until on March 9, 1933, he was elevated to the speakership, the highest office to be bestowed by the house of representatives. He won the post, succeeding Vice President John N. Garner, after a bitter three cornered fight against Representative Joseph T. Byrns [Dem., Tenn.] and Representative John McDuffie [Dem., Ala.].

As presiding officer of the lower house in the national legislature he became a wheel horse in the New Deal, supporting President Roosevelt's program without exception. A silver advocate in the days of Bryan, his most outstanding fight at the last session was for silver legislation. It culminated in the silver purchase act of 1934.

Lived Quiet Life.

Outside of congress Speaker Rainey lived a quiet life. In Washington the Raineys lived in a small apartment on 16th street and went out in the swirl of official society as little as possible. Even after her husband had been elected speaker, Mrs. Rainey worked around his office as his secretary. Together they would sit down each Saturday and answer the mail piled up during the week.

Back in Carrollton, which he called home for the full 73 years of his life, Speaker Rainey lived in a rambling frame house on a 500 acre farm. Though as a young man he practiced law in Carrollton, farming was Speaker Rainey's avocation.

"I think I have one of the best farms in Illinois," he used to say, "but I am having difficulty making enough money out of it to pay taxes."

Pure Bred Cattle.

He stocked his farm with pure bred Holstein Friesian cattle and fine Hampshire hogs. Over his farm roamed a herd of sacred Japanese deer, bred from a buck and two does which were obtained from the Washington zoo in exchange for a porcupine. Produce from the farm he had trucked into St. Louis, about 70 miles to the south.

Although the Raineys had no children, the Rainey farm sported a wading pool which the speaker had had built for neighbors' children, to whom he gave the run of the grounds. Year in and year out he was careful to see that an American flag floated atop his farm's eighty foot flagpole.

College Boxing Champion.

Rainey's family settled in Green county, Illinois, in 1814. Born and raised near Carrollton, Young Henry was sent to Amherst college for his "book larnin'." A hulking farmer's son out of the west, he smashed his way to the college's heavyweight boxing championship. No heavy youth, Rainey did the 100 yard dash in 10.2 seconds. To the end he retained his physical vigor and well being.

Graduating from Amherst in 1883, Rainey took a law degree at Northwestern in Chicago and then began practicing law in Carrollton. He started his congressional career by loudly denouncing Theodore Roosevelt for the Panama canal "grab" and imperialism, the old Bryan issues.

When he failed of reëlection in 1920, a compliment, unprecedented in history, was paid to him by his colleagues who held open his place on the powerful revenue committee. Two years later he was returned to Washington—and his old place on the revenue committee.

As a member of that committee, he helped draft the world war revenue measure. He was the author of the tariff commission law, and much other important legislation during his years in the house.

BALLOON'S FLIGHT

DEATH SHOCKS CAPITAL

Washington, D. C., Aug. 20.—(AP)—President Roosevelt expressed his regrets today over the death of Speaker Henry T. Rainey, calling him "a humanitarian whose fine patriotism thought first of all of what he conceived to be the well-being and the interests of the common man."

The President's statement, sent to the White House from the yacht Sequoia, on which he was cruising over the week-end, follows:

"It must always be an occasion of national regret when a public servant who has given the greater part of his life to unselfish service passes away. This is especially true in the loss of Speaker Rainey at a time when the experience of many years has culminated in his unselfish leadership of the nation's house of representatives.

"I had the privilege of knowing him first more than a score of years ago. I shall always think of him as a humanitarian whose fine patriotism thought first of all of what he conceived to be the well-being and the interests of the common man. Through all the years he kept the spirit of youth, and he will be missed profoundly by old and young alike."

Assistant Secretary of State Moore, who served with Mr. Rainey in the house, expressed himself as shocked by his death.

Senator Fletcher said: "I think his death is a great loss to the whole country.

"Mr. Rainey was a splendid man, a patriot, and a statesman. It is terrible to lose him at this time when he is so badly neded by the nation."

"Served Without Prejudice."

Secretary of Commerce Roper:

"I am profoundly grieved over the passing of one of the great men of this era. I have known him for twenty years, and never have been associated with a more congenial, more effective, more patriotic man than he was in his congressional work. He knew how to serve the nation without prejudice to any one. The country has sustained a great loss in the death of Henry T. Rainey."

Horner Says State Mourns.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Gov. Henry Horner issued the following statement when apprised of the death of Speaker Henry T. Rainey:

"All America is saddened by the death of Speaker Henry T. Rainey. A valiant battler in the cause of the people is called from earthly service in the zenith of his career. The nation and the state of Illinois he so devotedly represented in congress mourn him, and at the same time hail the stupendous accomplishments for state and nation his great heart and brain have wrought during many years of unabated and matchless public service.

RAINEY'S DEATH CASTS DOUBT ON NEXT HOUSE RULE

Party Congressmen to Run Without Chieftain.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—(AP)—The leadership of the next house was in doubt tonight as a result of the death in St. Louis of Speaker Henry T. Rainey.

The passing of the veteran "liberal" who ascended to the speakership when John N. Garner dropped the gavel in the house on March 4, 1933, to pick up that of the Vice President in the senate, left the overwhelming Democratic house seeking reëlection without a chieftain.

The speaker nominees of both the Republican and the Democratic party are selected at caucauses of house members and then put forward when the house organizes at the beginning of a new congress.

In 1933 Rainey and Representative Joseph Byrns of Tennessee captured the leadership of the Democrats, defeating Representative John McDuffie of Alabama, who had been whip of the house under Speaker Garner in the last two years of the Hoover administration.

Ran on Liberal Platform.

Rainey and Byrns made their race on a liberal platform, while McDuffie was considered a conservative.

Byrns, chairman also of the important Democratic congressional campaign committee, is certain to be a candidate as successor to Rainey.

In addition, Sam Rayburn of Texas and William B. Bankhead of Alabama will be put forward for the speakership.

Last spring, when there was some discussion of the success of Rainey's leadership, there was some talk in administration circles about putting up a younger and possibly stronger candidate in 1936 when President Roosevelt will seek reelection.

At that time the names of Rayburn, Bankhead, Lindsay C. Warren of North Carolina, Clifton A. Woodrum of Virginia, McDuffie of Alabama, and John W. McCormack of Massachusetts were among those discussed.

Boosts Byrn's Stock.

The death of the speaker makes Byrns the Democratic top man in the house. In addition, Byrns has been active as chairman of the Democratic congressional committee in the campaigns of Democratic house members seeking reëlection. He has written many letters to congressmen about how their services have helped the Democratic leadership in pushing through recovery legislation.

Further, under Democratic caucus rules, Byrns has authority to call a caucus of the members. One can be forced by a petition of 25 members.

RAINEY'S DEATH BRINGS A DEEP SHOCK TO GARNER

Uvalde, Tex., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Vice President John Nance Garner said tonight the death of Speaker Henry T. Rainey "deeply shocks and grieves me." Mr. Garner and Mr. Rainey were closely associated during Mr. Garner's many years as speaker of the house and it was commonly known that Mr. Garner was pleased when the Illinois representative was named to succeed him upon his own election to the vice presidency.

CARROLLTON MOURNS PASSING OF RAINEY, FRIEND AND NEIGHBOR

Carrollton, Ill., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Sorrow spread over this town of 2,075 inhabitants tonight as word of the death of its most famous son, Speaker Henry T. Rainey, was whispered through the quiet streets.

But Carrollton sorrowed, not for the passing of one of the nation's great but for a friend and a neighbor. In long years of constant association the speaker had won the friendship of farmers and townspeople of this agricultural district.

With him they shared the life of his beautiful "Walnut Hill" estate, and with him the joy of triumph when he was elevated to the highest congressional office. To his neighbors, his death represented a personal loss.

DIETERICH SEES MRS. RAINEY AS CANDIDATE

Beardstown, Ill., Aug. 19.—(AP)—The possibility that Mrs. Henry T. Rainey, widow of the late speaker of the national house of representatives, might become the Democratic party's choice for candidate to her husband's congressional seat, was expressed tonight by Senator William H. Dieterich [Dem., Ill.].

"I regard the speaker's death as a tragedy" said the senator, long an associate of the late representative in the 20th Illinois district in which both resided. "Not only has the district lost a good congressman but Illinois has lost heavily and is deprived of a great leader."

A successor to the speaker as the party's candidate for the seat he had held so many years will be chosen by a district convention, the senator said in asserting choice of Mrs. Rainey to fill her late husband's place on the ticket was "well within the range of possibility."

"Mrs. Rainey had been her husband's secretary for years" the senator said. "There's no one in the state of Illinois better acquainted with congressional work than she. She was actively at her husband's side and attended to the details of his office."

SPARROWS DROWN IN CEMETERY.

FRUITS OF NEW DEAL MONETARY POLICIES BITTER

Nearly Two Billions of Credit Lie Idle.

are backed by only 40 cents' worth of silver in the treasury vaults, and while Secretary Morgenthau has announced that for the present only an inconsequential amount of such currency will be issued and the regular issues will be limited to the market value of silver purchased, he also announced that "the treasury is still operating on a 24 hour basis." Twenty-four hour policies are not greatly assuring to financiers confronted with the necessity for making long term obligations or loans.

Another unfavorable development was the reception given by investors to the treasury's offer of 150 million dollars in HOLC bonds. Though the issue was unconditionally guaranteed by the treasury, both as to interest and principle, only a few bids were at or above par, and most of the issue sold went at a figure between 99 and par. Not in recent history have any interest bearing government securities sold below par. But even at 99 there were not enough bidders to take up the whole issue, and the treasury itself bought in a remainder of 28 millions of the HOLC bonds at that figure.

Discouraged by Green Bay Speech.

Investors were also discouraged by the speech delivered at Green Bay, Wis., by President Roosevelt, in which he told bluntly his refusal to sound a special note of confidence to business men.

These developments brought a dangerous weakening to government bonds in the market, with the result that the treasury, in order to stem the weakness, had to buy $45,098,100 of its own securities in the open market at rising prices.

Afterward the bond market steadied on its own, but the incident added greatly to the worries of Secretary Morgenthau, who next Sept. 15 must refinance a billion dollars of maturing Liberty bonds, as well as borrow added new millions wherewith to keep going the mammoth expenditures of the New Deal.

With all the troubles over financing, and the breakdown of credit—or possibly because of them—the business situation in the country, as viewed by private economists and government economists as well, is continuing to slip.

Reports Downward Trend.

The department of commerce in a weekly summary of business conditions reports today:

"Statistics for the week ended Aug. 11 indicate a continuation of the slight downward tendency in productive activity that has prevailed for the last five weeks, following the sharp decline in the week of July 7. Steel production declined for the third consecutive week to 25.8 per cent of capacity, and the schedule of operations for the week of Aug. 18 is set at 32.3 per cent, which is the lowest rate in more than a year, and less than half of the average rate of operations for the first six months of this year. . . . The output of automobiles again declined slightly. . . . Electric power production increased over that of the previous week. . . . Lumber production for the week of Aug. 4 was above that for any of the five preceding weeks."

The national industrial conference board reported:

"Production and trade fell off more than seasonally in July and the first two weeks of August. . . . To the midsummer dullness usual in July were added declines in major divisions of industrial activity at rates which were greater than in May or June. Prices of nonagricultural items declined slightly in July and the first half of August, while prices of farm products and of foods advanced measurably. Security prices declined during the month; declines were general in all important classes of stock and bonds.

Production Decline Heavy.

"Productive activity showed visible recessions in recent weeks. Automobile output, building construction, steel and iron production and textile output declined by amounts larger than seasonal at this time of year. Bituminous coal production fell off measurably in July, as it did in June, although increases are normally seasonal. Electric power output alone fell off by an amount less than expected during July."

TWO ROB DRUG STORE.

Two Negro robbers held up the manager, cashier and two customers of a Walgreen drug store at 4657 Woodlawn avenue early yesterday. They took money and jewelry amounting to $40 and escaped after being fired on by the watchman of an apartment building.

NRA Finds Some Film Studios Pay as High as $180,000 Year

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Much has been heard about big salaries of motion picture stars and directors. Here are some findings on persons out of the limelight, but very much in the big money.

These figures were brought out by a recent investigation under the NRA code for the film industry. Highest on the list is a counsel, presumably an attorney, who received $179,599 during 1933.

Dropping down more than $100,000 is to be found a manager of the camera department. He got $46,000 for 1933. This is a high executive post.

A dance director received $35,700. A research expert drew $35,600; a designer, assuredly of settings, $29,440; a publicity manager, $27,640; a cameraman, $26,848; a musical director, $25,740, and a musical conductor, $24,353.

Yet another publicity director got $21,375; two other cameramen $21,000; an attorney, around $21,000; a song director, $20,575; a song writer, $20,013; a technician, $19,900; a casting director, $19,467; a tax representative, $19,200.

Ranging through all departments more than 3,000 different individuals were listed in the report. A lyric writer received $15,870 at one studio; a unit manager got $15,250; an assistant editor, $14,525; a cutting superintendent, $14,078; a cartoonist, $13,758; a labor supervisor, $13,500; an assistant publicist, $12,855; a chief engineer, $12,855; a patent attorney, $12,125; an export manager, $12,095; a dialog director, $12,000; an advertising manager, $11,580.

In still smaller brackets are listed a makeup expert, $10,863; a makeup editor, $10,400; a censor, $10,029; a team of writers, $10,000; a set dresser, $9,677; a laboratory manager, $9,050; a cutter, $8,650; a junk film department manager, $8,590; a scorer [musical], $8,475; a construction superintendent, $8,149; a medical doctor, $7,275; rentals manager, $6,745; a pilot, $1,050; a gagman, $1,033.

FIVE DROWNED AS MOTORBOAT UPSETS IN RIVER

Portland, Ore., Aug. 19.—(AP)—A short, sudden turn in a 15 foot outboard motorboat tonight sent five persons to their deaths by drowning in the Columbia river near here.

The dead, all members of a Sunday afternoon boating party, are:

Mrs. O. G. McCann; her son, Delbert McCann; Billy Nelson; Marvin Gholson, 37, and Audrey Gholson, his six year old daughter. The bodies of Mrs. McCann, her son and the Nelson boy were recovered shortly after the accident. All lived here.

Nine persons were on board the 15 foot craft as it went up the stream some 300 yards from the Oregon shore. Without warning it turned sharply to the left, a witness said, and ploughed its side under the water.

WALLACE URGES ECONOMIC RULE OF U. S. AFFAIRS

Suggests Council to Take Place of Politicians.

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—An "economic democracy," closely approaching Fascism in its devices and aims, was outlined by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace here today as the next necessity in the American scheme.

The secretary addressed several thousand Illinois and Wisconsin farmers at Camp Grant. He spoke extemporaneously and was careful to emphasize that he was "an outsider" and that he was "not speaking for the recovery administration."

"During the last year and a half we have been using methods which to some extent have been temporary and to some extent have been permanent in nature," he said. "Now we are faced with the necessity of making modifications looking toward an economic democracy."

Suggests Control Council.

The nation long has had a political democracy, he explained, but it was his belief that to perfect this system expansion of economics in government is necessary.

The system he outlined in his address would consist of a "council" of representatives of the various economic divisions in American life, including farmers, industrialists, bankers, laborers, and consumers. The government, under the projected system, would act as referee.

"I do not mean by this anything in the nature of communism," Mr. Wallace added. "There are certain things in communism alien to the spirit of democracy. We have made some progress in recent months, due in part to the emergency and temporary measures, and due in part also to the methods which may become permanent."

Would Co-ordinate New Deal.

The organization he outlined he would call the national economic council. He declared that such a body would be able more fully to bring about co-ordination between NRA, attempting to benefit industry and labor, and AAA, trying to aid agriculture. The only way the two groups could hope to be successful, he said, was by co-ordination, and he believed his new plan to be the best way to accomplish this.

As a first step toward the achievement of such a program he cited the local methods of administering the AAA program:

"The county control committee now carries the news of national and international conditions ot the people. They say, 'This is your past; this is your share of the future.' Here is at work the very fundamental of an economic democracy as distinguished from a political democracy. These forces must determine in a quantitative way just what is justice between this one, that one, and the other.

Would Expand Codes.

"I would expand code authorities to include representatives of labor and consumer, as well as the particular industry involved, with the government either as an active participant, or sitting off to one side as a referee. The people will train themselves to say, 'this is justice for this group, that is justice for that.'

"Ninety per cent of the people want to avoid a dictatorship of either the communist or Fascist type.

"I can envision another step, another economic council, but it is too early to be definite. In a way we have something of the kind in Washington now, but some day we must have it more definitly recognized by congress.

"No matter how much of this machinery we might have, it will avail little unless the great rank and file are better informed and better intentioned. We should cast out prejudice, fear and grief, which make it impossible for us to think, impossible to weigh the cold, hard facts. Prejudice, fear and grief would be positively immoral under an economic democracy."

Takes Up AAA Program.

In addition to the general theme of his speech, which was concerned principally with his outline of the ideal of an "economic democracy," Mr. Wallace entered into some discussion of the AAA program as it stands at present.

"Some people say there is something sinful about controling acreage," he said. "They think it is all right for a factory to shut down and throw people out of work. I see no distinction. It is more necessary to control agricultural production than industrial production, because stomachs just won't expand. We could have two cars in every garage if motor makers produced on the same basis as farmers produce, and make prices drop as farm prices drop.

"The AAA is not a reduction program; it is an adjustment program. There is plenty of food for humans. There is a shortage of feed for live stock.

"The cotton plowed under in the south this last year represented lard from 14 million hogs. Cotton seed oil is a direct competitor of lard. The cotton that will not be produced this year under the contracted acres represents the lard of probably 20 million hogs. Whatever is done to the cotton in the south has an effect on the hog prices in the middle west, and whatever is done to the cotton in the south has something to do with industrial centers.

Must Stop Producing.

"When we get down to the final ultimate, a lot depends on how many acres we have producing stuff that can't be consumed in this country or sold abroad. Sooner or later we must not produce the extra stuff. We eventually will have to face it, and no monetary device on earth can enable us to escape it in the long run.

"We are preparing now, in a sense, for a battle for unity as determining the future as the battle for unity fought in the civil war. The important thing for the great middle class is to preach the doctrine that we are all members of one body."

HEIRESS WEDS TRUCK DRIVER

Mother Offers Aid

MANILA, P. I., Aug. 19.—(AP)—The mother of Colletta Mulvihill, whose sunrise elopement and marriage to Thomas Green, a truck driver, created a sensation in Pittsburgh, said here today that she was ready to help her daughter obtain an annulment.

But, added Mrs. Thomas J. Mulvihill, divorced wife of the wealthy Pittsburgh oil man, "Colletta will have to make her own decision in this matter. If she wants to live with Green, that's her affair."

The couple married Thursday morning at Wellsburg, W. Va. Yesterday, however, the bride said her marriage was all just a lark.

"I'll get it annuled," she added.

Mrs. Mulvihill stated that she has delayed a planned trip to the United States and is now awaiting word from Colletta, who, she said, is only 15 years old.

Mrs. Mulvihill and her daughter came to Manila from Shanghai about a year ago. Last April Colletta left for the United States to visit her father for the first time since her parents were divorced.

Fernald Posselt, 24 years old, an enlisted man in the United States navy, was drowned yesterday afternoon when he went to the assistance of two girls who had been carried out into the lake by the undertow off the Wilson avenue beach.

The girls, Miss Dorothy Strand, 24 years old, and her sister, Bernice, 20 years old, both of 4107 North Damen avenue, were saved by George Bowler, a life guard. With the assistance of Posselt the girls stayed afloat until Bowler reached them and dragged them to shallow water. Posselt was unable, without assistance, to get in and he sank as Bowler was returning for him. The body was recovered.

Dorothy Strand, who had gone to the beach with the sailor, said that she and her sister were poor swimmers and that Posselt was not much more skilful in the water than they. Posselt was a member of the crew of the U. S. S. Maryland and was spending a furlough with relatives at 2448 Irving Park boulevard.

A Chicago girl was drowned in another tragedy yesterday at Grand beach, near Michigan City, Ind. When she dived from a raft the undertow caught Miss Frances Minton, 17 years old, 8921 South Damen avenue, daughter of Frank L. Minton. Bert Furst, a life guard, started dragging her to shore, but in the rough water she slipped from his grasp. When finally she was found and was taken out resuscitation failed.

SEEK FIREBUG IN HOLOCAUST.

Skowhegan, Me., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Authorities tonight searched for a firebug blamed for two of three fires which today caused damages in excess of $100,000, killed one person and injured a score.

HIJACKERS BUSY; INSURANCE SOARS ON BEER CARGOES

Loot of $10,000 a Month Forces Rates to 8%.

Hijackers who have been looting at the rate of nearly $10,000 a month the beer and whisky trucks of legitimate distillers and brewers about Chicago have brought about conditions under which it is virtually impossible to obtain "cargo insurance" for these commodities, it was learned yesterday.

Many of the old line marine, fire, and automobile insurance companies that now sell the cargo insurance for all other types of cargoes have recently refused to issue policies for beer trucks. Others have insisted, before insuring the shipper, manufacturer, or retailer, who applies for a policy, that armed guards be assigned to the delivery trucks.

Rates, which formerly ranged from a fraction of 1 per cent to 1 per cent of the gross value of the commodities carried on trucks, now have kited to from 8 to 10 per cent of the gross value.

Operate Chiefly Outside County.

At those percentages shippers of beer and whisky pay $80 insurance for each $1,000 in value insured. The old rates ranged from $5 to $10 a thousand.

These were facts admitted yesterday by officials of the Marine Underwriters' association, and several of the largest insurance companies. The depredations of the hi-jackers, they said, have been curbed in Cook county through a recent campaign against this type of crime, but the activities of the criminals have shifted to highways in the lower and central portion of the state.

During prohibition times the insurance companies, of course, did not write insurance on beer or whisky. Their rates, however, since prohibition was repealed, have soared steadily.

Hope for Police Coöperation.

One official said: "We set the rates high to begin with, but we found that they were not high enough to compensate us and so as we gained experience we've increased them."

County highway police, suburban municipalities' law officers, and state highway police are now arranging to coöperate to stamp out hi-jacking. At the present there is no central group where all hi-jackings in the state are reported, but there will be more than $120,000 worth of beer and whisky stolen by the gunmen during the first year of repeal, the police estimated, if these crimes continue at the present rate.

Many shippers find it impossible to pay the high insurance rates and their trucks are unprotected. Others, who find it essential to provide insurance, say, "We hate to pay the high rates but we're glad to find any company that will insure our loads on any basis."

Prefer Rural Highways.

Members of the cartage detail of the detective bureau said last night that there had been few cargoes hijacked in the city limits. There was one such instance about a week ago, but in general the robbers prefer to catch the trucks on country roads, where witnesses are not so plentiful.

A chorus of three thousand voices and more than two thousand dancers and eight hundred musicians will participate in a free pageant, The Drama of Chicago on Parade, which will be held in Soldiers' field Sept. 16 as the climax to Chicago's first annual homecoming week celebration.

NINE ARMY PLANES LAND AT DAYTON, O., EN ROUTE TO CAPITAL

Dayton, O., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Nearing the end of a history making flight that has taken them from the nation's capital, across desert land to Alaska and return, nine United States army bombing planes settled down upon Patterson field late today, en route to their point of first takeoff.

The tenth experienced motor trouble, and tonight was at Omaha, Neb., from where it will hop tomorrow for Dayton, thence to Washington.

The entire flight, commanded by Lieut. Col. H. H. Arnold, is due at Bolling field some time tomorrow.

The planes started this morning from Salt Lake City, Utah, at 6:20 o'clock [M. S. T.]. Six landed at Omaha, shortly after 2 o'clock. One, piloted by Captain John Corkille, developed motor trouble while on the ground there and remained behind. The remaining four made North Platte, Neb., their objective refueling there before the takeoff for Dayton.

JAIL 124 FORMER VOTE OFFICIALS IN LAST 10 MONTHS

Cashen Reveals Poll Fraud Cleanup.

Prosecution of dishonest election officials, some of them women, on charges of contempt of court has resulted in the conviction of 124 former judges and clerks of election during the last ten months, Attorney John F. Cashen Jr., special prosecutor for the board of election commissioners, reported yesterday. All of the convictions were obtained in the County court.

Sentences ranging from ten days to three months in the county jail were meted out to the majority of the defendants, while the others were fined from $15 to $200 each. In 66 cases, acquittals were won by the poll workers.

Arrests Follow Recount.

The arrests of the poll workers in most cases followed the disclosure of fraudulent canvass of votes in the recount of votes ordered in the various election contests. Evidence of wrongdoing on the part of the officials was also obtained by special watchers employed by the election board during the last April 10 primary.

Investigation of large vote discrepancies discovered during the recount of votes in the Hasten-Heller recount resulted in 86 convictions, said Attorney Cashen. In this contest, Judge Samuel Heller was declared winner by the County court after being defeated in the vote returns by Judge Irwin J. Hasten.

28 Guilty in One Case.

Frauds disclosed in the recount of votes in the Kunz-Granata contest resulted in 28 omcials being found guilty of misconduct and making a fraudulent canvass of votes, records of the court showed.

Prosecutor Cashen explained the methods allegedly used by the poll workers in favoring their particular candidate. "Our investigation showed the judges and clerks would deliberately miscount the votes and make a fraudulent tally," Cashen said. "In many cases we found ballots had been erased and remarked or that the poll officials had permitted duplication of votes."

CONNECT KILLING OF UNION AGENT TO QUINLAN CASE

Seek Two Other Painters' Officials for Quiz.

The slaying of Roy Thompson, 42 years old, a business agent for the painters' union, who was shot to death before his home at 8241 Dorchester avenue late Saturday night while his wife was looking on from a window, is believed by the Burnside police to be connected with the murder of Michael [Buba] Quinlan on June 20 in a south side restaurant.

Thompson, who had attended a picnic earlier in the day, was being driven home by Henry Smid, 11717 Princeton avenue. As they stopped at the Dorchester avenue address and got out of the automobile, another car, which had been trailing them, stopped. A man jumped out with a pistol and fired six shots, five of which struck Thompson. A sixth shot entered the window and narrowly missed Mrs. Thompson. Smid was not wounded.

Orders Two Questioned.

After the shooting Acting Captain Eugene McCarthy of the Burnside station ordered that Roy (Muckie) Shields, business agent for the Painters and Decorators' union, local 184, with which union Thompson was also connected, and James Dugan, 45 years old, business agent for local 191 of the painters' union, be taken into custody for questioning.

The police have been searching for Shields for questioning in connection with the killing of Quinlan, former beer runner, who was said to have attempted to get control of the Tuck Pointers' union. The police say that just before the murder of Quinlan he and Shields quarreled. Dugan, Capt. McCarthy said, was seen near Thompson's home Saturday night shortly after the shooting.

Daughters Recount Dispute.

Mrs. Thompson told the police that her husband and Shields were good friends and that Dugan had visited them at their home on several occasions.

Thompson's twin daughters, Edith and Lorraine, 13 years old, who had attended the picnic with their father at Justice Park, told the police that at the picnic their father had a quarrel with several men whom they did not know. Smid declared that he had not seen any argument at the picnic grounds.

Witnesses to the slaying of Quinlan were taken yesterday to the undertaking rooms at 730 East 63d street to view Thompson's body. They said he was not the man who walked into the restaurant at 63d street and Cottage Grove avenue and killed Quinlan.

PUBLICATIONS OF RADICALS FOUND BITTER BUT SAD

Seen Aware Their Revolt Is Futile.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 19.—[Special.]—In the list of contributing editors to The New Republic appears the name of Rexford Guy Tugwell, the verbally adroit undersecretary of agriculture who is popularly known as the head of the Roosevelt brain trust. And this publication presents admirably in its style and contents the devious Tugwellian methods of campaigning for the planned state.

Where the uncompromising communist weekly like The New Masses roars for the revolution and overthrow of government, The New Republic deftly seeks to incite an angry class-consciousness.

Vexed with Roosevelt.

Strangely enough, this periodical, which carries the name of Tugwell on its editorial page, is dissatisfied with Prof. Tugwell's chief, President Roosevelt. In the Aug. 22 issue, under the caption, "Mr. Roosevelt's Intentions," the following statement appears:

"It is now clear to everyone that early last spring President Roosevelt turned rather sharply to the right . . . will the President continue to yield on the chief issues to dominant industries and financial groups? or will he . . . try once more to push out government money in large enough quantities to furnish a back log of consumer purchasing power? . . . If the New Deal is to be kept new, and if it is ever to be made over into that newer deal which this country so urgently needs, it is imperative that every force of public opinion be marshaled in support of such a development. As it is, the Tories have the battalions—and know well how they should be used."

Amusing Article on Fair.

Editor Bruce Bliven furnished an amusing [to Tories] article on the Chicago World's Fair last year. After viewing the Exposition, which he contemptuously termed "A Century of Treadmill," he editorialized bitterly as follows:

"If this country is going through a revolution, the people who come to the Fair don't seem to know it."

Scornfully he told of farmers examining farm machinery with interest and thousands absorbed in the spectacle of a motor car being put together. Mr. Bliven is a New Yorker of many years standing and he quickly returned here where they know all about the revolution and understand how important it is.

Villard Has Ownership Taint.

Oswald Garrison Villard, owner, publisher and contributing editor of The Nation, is somewhat tainted with the stigma of rugged individualism as president of the Fort Montgomery Iron corporation of New York. But his weekly carries on bravely for the left wing.

The latest issue carries an article pointing out that five million American families, or about 20,000,000 people, are receiving relief from the government and that they are only getting $60,000,000 a month, where at least $135,000,000 is needed. Rebuilding of the economic structure is the only remedy, the article comments, but ends on the reassuring note that "the masses of the people are becoming more conscious of their needs and of their strength."

The Nation is also, like the other magazines of its type, worried about Huey Long and his attractive program for splitting all wealth and giving each inhabitant at least $5,000 a year.

The Post Included.

Mr. Villard once owned the New York Evening Post. He sold it in 1918. Two of the contributors in the Aug. 22 issue of The Nation are Isidor Feinstein, chief editorial writer of the Post, and Ludwig Lore, a columnist. The Post may well be included in this discussion.

When David Stern, Philadelphia publisher, bought the Post last December, he received a letter from his old friend, President Roosevelt, which said, in part: "My Dear Dave: I am delighted to hear of your purchase. There is a place for the right kind of newspaper in New York."

And the "right kind of newspaper" the Post has turned out to be. In editorial and news column, it has flayed Wall street, upbraided the radical Mayor La Guardia for not being radical enough and concentrated on campaigns about police brutality to strikers and picketers.

News Story on Mayor's Orders.

In yesterday's issue, the news story concerning the mayor's orders to police to "go easy" on strikers, contained the following somewhat editorialized lead:

"The long sought new deal in police treatment of strikers was finally obtained from Mayor La Guardia today. In a twelve page secret order, police are peremptorily told to cease their 'storm troop' methods, used so often against peaceful picketers."

When President Green of the American Federation of Labor commented upon the "tremendous Communist influence" existing in the publishing world in New York, he knew whereof he spoke. But Mr. Green may have over-emphasized the importance of the radical publications. New York is thoroughly conscious of the "revolution" but, as Editor Bliven pointed out sadly, the people he saw visiting the Fair in Chicago didn't seem to be aware of the coming catastrophe.

ALL TROOPS QUIT KOHLER TODAY; 30 DEPUTIES STAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Kohler, Wis., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—The 105th cavalry of Milwaukee, the last of the troops which have been guarding this village since the bloody strike riots of the night of July 27 will be withdrawn at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning.

In their place 25 to 30 special deputy sheriffs, directed by Sheriff Ernst Zehms, will patrol High street, the principal business street on which the Kohler plant and showrooms are located and which was the scene of the previous riots.

The strikers today promised not to riot. In a conference with Sheriff Zehms and the supervisors of the village, they made the same agreement they previously had made with the military. They will continue to picket the plant in shifts of 200 and will withdraw at 8 o'clock.

The arrangement was announced by David Rabinowitz, counsel for the strikers, who with Charles Heymanns, chairman of their bargaining committee, and Rudolph Renn, chairman of the strike committee, attended the conference.

General Strike in Manila May Follow Cigar Tieup

MANILA, P. I., Aug. 20.—[Monday.]—(AP)—Manila was threatened with a general strike of union labor today.

Several thousand cigar workers have been out on strike for several days, and in an attempt to extend the walkout to all organized labor sawmill workers began balloting today on a strike proposal. The step was taken as a display of sympathy for the cause of the cigar workers.

MARK TIME IN BUS STRIKE; AWAITING ACTION FROM NRA

Government Investigator Reported on Way Here.

Yesterday, the fourth day of the strike called against the Chicago Motor Coach company by the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes, passed without major disorders. Both sides stood firm, the bus company operating full service and the union continuing its picketing activities.

Although it was asserted neither side had been informed of any action taken by the NRA in Washington, there were reports that an investigator had been sent here to report on the situation. Presumably this investigator would carry his report, dealing with the conflicting claims of the employes and the company officials, either to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson or to President Roosevelt, who has promised to look into the strike.

The Amalgamated union executives, it is known, are greatly disappointed at Gen. Johnson's failure to "crack down" and to remove the company's Blue Eagle, as recommended by the national labor relations board after the company flatly refused to reinstate 24 discharged men or to recognize the Amalgamated.

The Points at Issue.

Recognition and these reinstatements comprise the demands of the strikers. The company has maintained that the 24 men were fired for inefficiency and that 95 per cent of their employes desire to be represented by their company union, the Motor Coach fraternity.

It was reported last night that the executive board of the Amalgamated association would meet in Detroit today and that a general policy in connection with the bus lines would be outlined. Presumably this policy would deal with the attitude to be taken by the divisions of the union to which street car and elevated road employes belong. These divisions have so far maintained, formally, a hands-off policy.

Two buses were stoned yesterday by men riding in automobiles. Two men, alleged to have tossed missils at a coach in Addison street at Claremont avenue, were pursued by a police squad car and captured after one of the pair had been shot and wounded in the scalp.

The man injured is Fred Baumgarten, 24 years old, 2723 New England avenue, a bus driver for the Chicago Surface Lines. His companion is William Kunze, 34 years old, 2727 New England avenue, an electrician. A third man in the car escaped.

Union Chief Complains.

Late last night Alfred Heath, 35 years old, 3753 Armitage avenue, a bus driver, reported that a stone had been hurled from a car into his bus at Lavergne avenue and Washington boulevard. He was struck in the back.

Autoists were reported also to have thrown rocks at buses at Jackson boulevard and Wood street.

Ralph Stoltzmann, president of the local which is on strike, complained yesterday that the police were interfering with pickets, "although no laws were being broken." The Chicago Federation of Labor, after listening to his plea, authorized a resolution protesting against "unfair methods being used against striking drivers and recognized unions." This resolution is to be forwarded to President Roosevelt, Mayor Kelly, and the American Federation of Labor.

Benjamin Weintraub, vice president of the coach company, pointed out that William Taber, international secretary of the amalgamated union, had asserted the violence since the strike started had all been the work of communist elements, and the police asserted they had interfered only

DRIPPING OF WHISKY HALTS SERVICES AT KENTUCKY CHURCH

Neon, Ky., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—There was excitement in the little church at Birchfield near the Virginia border today. The choir had finished singing "Nearer My God to Thee" and Rev. Sam Willis, pastor had kneeled for prayer. There was a gush from above, a heavy trickling, then the odor of moonshine whisky. Some of the members were drenched. Services were halted.

The congregation insisted that the Rev. Mr. Willis being the smallest man present pass through a small opening to the attic and investigate. There he found five gallon kegs of "moonshine." The container had sprung a leak.

CLOSE MARKET AREA TO TRAFIC IN MINNEAPOLIS

Prepare for Truckmen to Cast Their Votes.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—The wholesale market district, center of bloody frays in the Minneapolis truckers' strike, tonight was ordered closed to all automobile trafic and merchandise movement at noon tomorrow.

The order, issued by Col. Elmer McDevitt, commander of National Guard troops, was apparently intended to circumvent any possibility of conflict growing out of the striking drivers' charges that owners have been "chiseling" on permits issued for truck operation by the military.

Two Policemen Killed There.

It was in this district that two special policemen lost their lives during the drivers' strike in May and where two strikers received fatal gunshot wounds in a battle with police in the present strike.

Closing of the district as plans were being formulated to hold an election among employés of the 166 establishments involved in the strike was considered a precaution to avoid any further strife that might prevent a speedy ending of the strike which has held Minneapolis in its grasp for 34 days.

It was expected that tomorrow afternoon would bring the situation to a head when compiling of the lists of employés of the 166 establishments concerned in the election will be completed.

Expect End Soon.

Despite some indications to the contrary, many onlookers believed that the end of this week would bring a close to the violence and the choking of business which began 34 days ago when the truck drivers walked out.

The attitude of the truck leaders, who have been branded as communists by employers, was one of the factors opposing a speedy settlement on election plans. They charged the election would be a "fake" and demanded they be assured of terms before pledging cooperation in the balloting.

TEXTILE UNION OPENS OFFICES TO PUSH STRIKE

New York, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Establishment of four regional offices to direct the strategy of the proposed nation-wide strike involving 500,000 cotton textile workers on or before Sept. 1 was announced tonight by Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of America.

These offices and the men in charge are: Greenville, S. C., John Peel; Providence, R. I., Horace Rivers; Cohoes, N. Y., Joseph White, and Philadelphia, William Kelly. McMahon said he and Francis J. Gorman, first vice president, will be in Washington coordinating the activities of the regional offices.

It was intimated after the final executive session of the officers today that the strike probably would not be called until Sept. 1, effective the following Monday, or Labor day. There will be no strike at least for another week, McMahon said.

The association places its membership among the half million workers in the industry at 300,000, or 60 per cent. It makes the same claims for allied textile industries, woolen and worsted, silk, rayon and synthetic rayon products, in which there are 325,000 men employed.

Taxi Driver Shot When He Resists Robbers

Louis Conrad, 33 years old, 4309 Kimball avenue, a Yellow cab driver, was shot in the right side and seriously wounded early today when he resisted an attempt of three Negroes to rob him at 31st and State streets. The men fled after the shooting. Conrad was taken to the Michael Reese hospital.

OLDER FOLKS must take EXTRA CARE in choosing a laxative

AS we grow older the human mechanism requires greater care. It hasn't the recuperative powers of Youth.

Violent, upsetting laxatives and purgatives are bad for everybody—but are particularly bad for older folks.

When a laxative is needed, it must be one that is gentle in action—that will not upset digestion—that will not nauseate and sicken.

EX-LAX—THE IDEAL LAXATIVE FOR OLD AND YOUNG!

Ex-Lax is so mild that for 28 years mothers have given it to their children with confidence. It is gentle enough for children and it is gentle enough for the requirements of older folks.

That's what people like about Ex-Lax—it is effective without being harsh or disturbing. It will not cause stomach pains. It works over-night without over-action.

EX-LAX WILL NOT FORM A HABIT!

You take Ex-Lax just when you need a laxative—it will not form a habit. And you don't have to keep on increasing the dose to get results.

WATCH OUT FOR IMITATIONS!

Ex-Lax has stood the test of time. It has been America's favorite laxative for 28 years. Insist on genuine Ex-Lax—spelled E-X-L-A-X—to make sure of getting Ex-Lax results. Over 50,000 druggists sell Ex-Lax—in 10c and 25c boxes.

POND AND SABELLI WRECK PLANE ON WELSH MOUNTAIN

New York-Ireland Flyers Escape Unhurt.

NEWPORT, Pembrokeshire, Wales, Aug. 19.—(AP)—George Pond and Cesare Sabelli, turned back by a raging storm over the Irish sea on a Rome to Dublin flight, attempted to land near here early this morning, but crashed into a mountain in the darkness, ruining their hopes for a return Atlantic flight. Miraculously they escaped injury.

The two flyers, who started from New York last May on a flight to Rome, crashing in Ireland and finishing their flight by easy stages, were only slightly injured, and suffered from shock. They were on the return journey, only a few hours' flying distance from Baldonnel airport, Dublin, their first goal.

The crash occurred about 4 a. m. after the flyers had experienced normal conditions almost all the way from Rome to the coast of Wales. Crawling from the wreckage, they spent the hours until daybreak under the plane's wings, for occupants of a nearby lonely farmhouse were afraid to open the door when they knocked.

Turned Back from Sea.

The pair made their way to the little village of Newport at daybreak. Pond said:

"We went right into a dense heavy fog, pouring rain, and strong wind when we reached the Irish sea. We cruised over the sea for about an hour, flying blind, then decided to return to the Welsh coast.

"I was piloting and came as low as I dared in the hope of finding a landing place. Suddenly we crashed, in pitch darkness. The plane turned completely over after burying its nose in the ground."

Pond said the plane, the Leonardo da Vinci, behaved splendidly all the way from Rome, and "we were confident we'd be able to make a new record for an east-west Atlantic crossing."

Dogged by Ill Luck.

While waiting for completion of repairs at Heston, Pond charged the plane had been maliciously tampered with at New York before the takeoff. Nothing ever came of the charges, however.

Until they showed up this morning no report had been received from Pond and Sabelli since their take-off at 7 a. m. Saturday at Rome.

After reaching Newport the flyers could not communicate immediately with the outside world. There was no telephone at the little hotel to which they made their way. The first report was sent to the air ministry at London by way of Fishguard, Wales.

Easter Lily Blooms in Midsummer

Grows in Back Yard

Mrs. A. Schumann, 2025 North Kedvale avenue, woke up yesterday morning to find an Easter lily blooming in the August sunshine of her back yard. Last Easter morning she was presented with a potted lily in bloom. When the blossom withered and the leaves yellowed she put the bulb in her back yard and forgot it. Several months later she saw fresh, green spikes protruding through the soil, but could not identify them. And yesterday the Easter lily bloomed again.

Architect Arrested in World's Fair Altercation

Paul Olsen, 533 Belden avenue, an architect, was arrested by World's Fair police last night in an altercation involving a bus and the white shoes of his woman companion. Attendants summoned Sergt. Sam McDowell who arrested Olsen and charged him with disorderly conduct. Olsen sat directly in front of a doorway on the bus, refusing to allow passengers to enter for fear his companion's shoes would be scuffed, the attendants said.

LABATT DRUGGED BY KIDNAPERS TO SILENCE HIM

Still Dulled by Dope, Says Report.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 19.—John Labatt, wealthy brewer, was deliberately doped by his kidnapers before they set him free and is still suffering from effects of the drug, according to a report which came indirectly from the Labatt residence today. Labatt was kidnaped last Tuesday and released early Friday morning.

What drug was used to dull the senses of the kidnap victim, and so add a further protection for the gangsters in their flight, was not revealed.

The week-end found provincial and Royal Canadian mounted police working at higher pressure than before with their activities concentrated in the London district. From that arises the belief now prevalent in London that when the solution of the mystery comes, some local resident will be found a party to the crime.

Detective Inspector Crowe of the Toronto police department and Inspector Hammar Gardner of the provincial police, who have been working together in search for the kidnapers, made a mysterious trip out of the district but returned for a conference held this morning at provincial police headquarters. Inspector Thomas Cousans of the London division and at least two members of the Royal Canadian mounted police, both from stations along the Michigan border, were called to the meeting.

The provincial police officials made it clear to the press that when an arrest is made, even though the man is placed behind the bars in London, they are bound by specific instructions to tell no one except Arthur W. Roebuck, attorney general of Ontario. If Roebuck deems fit he will make the matter public. It is a new rule in Ontario, but is being accepted with fair grace by the press.

The policemen declined to say whether or not they had discovered any clew to the identity of the three or four men who held Labatt prisoner for sixty-three hours pending a decision as to their demand for a ransom of $150,000.

How much ransom, if any, was paid before Labatt was released has not been divulged. Some unverified reports have placed it at from $50,000 to $80,000, and other reports, also lacking official confirmation, were that no ransom was paid.

Thomas J. Bowler, president of the sanitary district, was cut and bruised yesterday when his car was struck by another at Algonquin and Barrington roads, near Algonquin, in northwestern Cook county. Mr. Bowler, with his chauffeur, Donald Schwark, who was driving, was on his way from his summer home at Cambridge, Wis., to attend a celebration in his honor at Logan square.

The other car in the collision was driven by E. Hammers, 1000 North Long avenue, according to State Patrolman Donald F. Curran, who investigated the accident. Mr. Bowler was the only one injured, and proceeded to Chicago in another car after his injuries were treated at Algonquin.

FIVE HURT AS 2 FLEEING POLICE, HIT FIVE AUTOS

Five persons were injured last night when two men, fleeing from a squad of Niles Center policemen, crashed a stolen automobile into five other cars at Dempster street and Kimball avenue, Niles Center.

The reckless fugitives, who were among the injured, are John Paczkowski, 19 years old, 1040 North Marshfield avenue, and Roland Machalla, also 19, of 1102 North Ashland avenue. After their injuries, which were minor, had been treated at the St. Francis hospital in Evanston, they were taken to the Niles Center police station.

Lawrence Garbert, 20 years old, 2031 Jarvis avenue; Mrs. Enid Dustin, 26 years old, 7536 Parkhurst avenue, and Miss Marie Curtin, 20 years old, 4514 North Paulina street, were the others hurt. They suffered cuts and bruises. The car in which Paczkowski rode had been reported stolen in Chicago fro[m]

BY HAROLD ETTLINGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 19.—Today's plebiscite in Germany marks the end of Minister of Propaganda Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels' career as one of the triumvirate of National Socialism, and will shortly be followed by continuance of the cleanup of the radical elements which began June 30, according to information received by usually reliable National Socialist circles in Paris.

Goebbels, as often rumored in the last two months, is now definitly to be removed from the propaganda ministry and made ambassador to Warsaw, Poland. Two other prominent Hitlerite leaders who are to lose their posts are Dr. Walter Darre, minister of agriculture, and Count Baldur von Schirach, head of Hitler Youth.

Has Hitler's Promise.

Nazi informants of THE TRIBUNE state that Chancellor Adolf Hitler has definitly committed himself to get rid of these men and to continue the purge of the party in exchange for the collaboration of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the reichsbank, who is also economic dictator of the reich, and for the support of other conservatives.

Dr. Schacht made the express condition that the cleanup be carried to its logical conclusion by the removal of Goebbels, Darre, and Von Schirach, who, it is well established, are the leading survivors of the group tinged with radical socialism which included Capt. Ernst Roehm, head of the Storm Troopers, who was executed in the purge of the Roehm revolt, and other alleged revolutionaries now dead.

Big industry and the reichswehr joined Dr. Schacht in demanding a conservative policy in exchange for their allegiance, it is asserted.

Retained for Campaign.

Hitler accepted Dr. Schacht's terms, but informed him after the death of Reichs President Paul von Hindenburg that he wished to keep Goebbels until after the plebiscite, in which he could render valuable service.

Not only would the dismissal of the three officials named be in line with Hitler's swing to the right in the past two months, but the chancellor is reported to have become increasingly suspicious of Goebbels since June 30, and never to have let him out of his sight during the cleanup begun then.

Goebbels, it is pointed out, is fully aware of the situation, and has remained unusually inactive since that time. In the plebiscite campaign he took a much smaller part than was expected.

What will become of the propaganda ministry is not yet settled. It is believed, however, that this organization will be dissolved and replaced by a reich press bureau under the direct orders of Chancellor Hitler, which will coöperate with the foreign office—the system in force prior to the Nazi régime.

Most Powerful Ruler.

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—Powers greater than those held by any ruler in the modern world are put in Hitler's hands as a result of today's plebiscite. As reich leader and reich chancellor he holds the powers that belonged to the late President von Hindenburg and he has in addition the enormous authority conferred on him as chancellor by an act adopted when the Nazis obtained full power in the reich.

Under that act he had virtually supreme legislative authority. He now inherits any and all executive authority that he did not enjoy under that act. In short, Hitler alone has the powers formerly exercised by the kaiser, the president and parliament. It must be realized that the reichstag has become a mere rubber stamp.

Hitler has the power to declare war and to make peace. He inherits from the late president the exclusive right to make binding agreements with other nations. Hence he alone may sign treaties and make alliances. His consent is required to all diplomatic appointments, and all German diplomatic representatives must report to him at his request.

Can Overule Courts.

Moreover, Hitler may annul existing legislation or call for new legislation. He employs and discharges all state employés unprotected by the complex civil service law. He has the power to pardon any person sentenced by a reich court, thus holding the power of setting aside a court decision.

Further, Hitler is commander-in-chief of the army, the navy and the air force. Under article XLVIII of the Weimar constitution—which is now moribund but which can be invoked at Hitler's will—he may employ force against any German province that in his opinion fails in its duty toward the reich.

ANTI-SEMITISM IS A CHRISTIAN CAMPAIGN, NAZI BISHOP ASSERTS

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Five thousand "German Christians" celebrating Chancellor Adolf Hitler's victory tonight heard their reichsbishop, Ludwig Mueller, call anti-Semitism a Christian campaign.

His words left no doubt in the minds of his hearers that the Germant Protestant church, under his leadership, will be a racial institution.

"Hitler's fight is a fight for Christendom against Jews, the most savage enemies of Christianity," the bishop asserted. "The German people, united as it is today, may go through bitterness and distress, but it will win this campaign for Christianity even if the Jews get together and determine to destroy the nation."

Drawing a parallel between Christ and Hitler, the reichsbishop said:

"As in the days of the old Christians, faith is equal to confidence. Jesus, preaching the gospel, pleaded for confidence. So did our leader when he put the plebiscite as a question of confidence to the nation. We, as true Christians, had to give him our 'Ja,' as only our consent gives him the right to defend our religion."

SERVE SUBPENAS TODAY FOR NAZI ACTIVITY PROBE

Subpenas were to be served today on witnesses to be questioned tomorrow by members of the subcommittee of the Dickstein congressional committee regarding Nazi and other foreign subversive propaganda. Names of the witnesses were not revealed. Rep. Carl M. Weideman of Michigan said the inquiry would be conducted secretly in the grand jury room of the United States courthouse tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday.

The committee received its authority for the investigation after Rep. Samuel Dickstein of New York, chairman of the committee on immigration and chief opponent of Nazism in this country, had charged that foreign governments are spending large amounts of money on propaganda here.

and 73,000 for him. Cologne gave 78 per cent yeses for Hitler and cast 19.3 per cent noes. Two per cent of the votes were invalid.

Hitler's Strongest Districts.

Württemberg, with its countless small towns, gave 1,700,000 votes for Hitler, and 117,000 against him. In the Palatinate, for instance, the yes vote was 96 per cent of the total, compared to 96.7 last November.

The complete unofficial count in Berlin gave Hitler 270,541 fewer votes than he received in November, a decrease of approximately 1 per cent. The figures for Greater Berlin: Yes, 2,450,859; no, 492,563; invalid, 75,129. The total vote in Greater Berlin was 3,018,551. The thoroughness of the drive to get out the full vote was indicated by the fact that in Greater Berlin the total registration was 3,458,186.

A great number of districts reported more votes than they had registered voters. It was declared that this was due to the fact that many Germans had equipped themselves with permits to vote outside of their districts while traveling about. The number of districts with surplus votes is higher than in the elections of earlier years.

The Nazis explain this by asserting that thanks to the Nazi "strength through joy" movement a vast group of the population is traveling which formerly was compelled to stay at home because of lack of funds.

The enthusiastic style adopted by officialdom was amusingly illustrated in a broadcast at midnight. The announcer declared that the shrieks of joy of the enthusiastic masses in front of the chancellery were so loud that they even drowned out the rumblings of thunder, which was a vast exaggeration.

The radio was devoted to government broadcasts the entire day and reported many incidents of the voting. The most dramatic occurred at Regensburg where a dying woman insisted on casting a ballot. She voted and then died.

A representative of THE TRIBUNE visited Potsdam, taking the political pulse of this old monarchist town. The ex-Crown Prince Wilhelm was in Munich and the ex-Crown Princess Cecile in Bayreuth, but their chamberlain stated that he was certain they had voted for Hitler.

The royalists did not relish yessing Hitler, but would sympathize with each other, declaring, "there is nothing else to do in the present circumstances." Prince Eitel Friedrich went to the polls in Potsdam, as did his brother, Prince Oscar. They are the second and fifth sons respectively of the ex-kaiser.

Police on Duty.

Police were much in evidence yesterday in Berlin and other big cities, with helmets strapped under their chins as in stormy times, but there was none of the excitement usually evident in an election or plebiscite. Flags floated from houses, airplanes soared on demonstration flights, and Nazi youths marched and sang, all as a matter of course.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon most towns reported a 70 per cent turnout of voters at the polls, which were kept open until 6 p. m.

Nazis in uniforms watched the polls, marched the streets and herded stragglers and cripples to the booths. Other Brown Shirts stood importantly on the running boards of cars put at their disposal.

Big signs decorated the streets asserting:

"The veteran of the front lines, Hitler, knows the meaning of war and maintains peace, therefore vote for him."

Others appealed to the democratic instincts of the masses:

"Hitler, born of the people, is chosen as leader," and

Patients All Vote "Yes."

The first report of a 100 per cent attendance at the polls came from Kiel, where every sailor in the district or passing through the Kiel canal voted before noon.

In Halle Hitler's yes men and yes women marched up in close formation from their clubs or associations to cast their votes.

At the Griefswald hospital voting was completed at 1 p. m. The patients who could not be moved, as well as the attendants, unanimously yessed Hitler.

In Berlin wounded veterans turned up at the polls immediately after they were opened.

In Cologne bronze busts of Hitler were placed on street corners. Men and women voters went to the polls separately, as is the tradition in Cologne, where the town authorities are anxious for analytical comparisons of masculine and feminine political reactions.

Roaring guns awakened the population at Karlsruhe for the Sunday plebiscite.

Only citizens between 20 and 102 actually cast ballots for [or, theoretically, against] Hitler's assumption of presidential power. But even little children partook in the great act of adulation, affirmation of or resignation to their fuehrer's leadership, come what may.

Outside thousands of polling places choirs of white bloused girls stood and chanted, "Fuehrer, we follow thee. Heil, heil, heil."

For six days Hitler's ablest lieutenants had appealed to the minds, emotions, and instincts of 66,000,000 Germans. For six days newspapers, periodicals, billboards, buildings, automobiles, airplanes, and even locomotives and street cars had carried great signs saying "Ja—Vote ja."

Among the first to vote yesterday was a 102 year old Thuringian widow. Germans from many foreign countries, among them Franz von Papen, now German minister to Austria, returned to take part in the voting.

As the act of voting was accomplished each elector was handed a printed slip on which were the printed words, "Hier Voten."

It was announced also that amnesties to prisoners which were one of the features of the plebiscite had been extended. At Dresden 500 prisoners were released, 200 were freed at Munich.

U. S. REVOLUTION GOAL OF LONG, WALMSLEY SAYS

Visions Strife as Fruit of Dictator Regime.

New Orleans, La., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—Senator Huey P. Long, to whom a docile legislature just handed over the powers of a dictator, aims to lead an American revolution, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, his political enemy, charged today in an interview.

The mayor, declaring civil war was virtually inevitable as the result of high handed tactics of the newly constituted Hitler of the Delta, made his statement as a "warning to persons in the east who find the antics of the kingfish so amusing."

"This man is dangerous," the mayor declared. "He and his ideas of government are a menace to American institutions throughout the country.

Tells "Revolt" Promise.

Then the mayor revealed, for the first time, he said, a conversation he had with Long in Washington about a year ago.

"I went to his room at night to tell him that his opposition to President Roosevelt's recovery program was making him unpopular back home," he said. "At that time the farmers' holiday was on and the unemployed or hunger marchers had just finished a demonstration in front of the Capitol.

"Huey sat up in bed—I remember the incident vividly because what he said had the same effect on me as though he had struck me in the face with a whip. He said, 'Semmes, there's going to be a revolution in this country and I'm going to lead it.'"

Poised for Coup.

"He mentioned Gov. Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota. He said he had the right idea but that he didn't have the brains to lead a revolution. When the right time came, Huey said, he would step out in front and try to manipulate a coup in congress to bring about a bloodless revolution."

Senator Long has drummed up a considerable following for his "share the wealth" program through his official organ, the American Progress, and his radio speeches. Now he is planning a speaking tour through the drouth area to begin after the primary election here Sept. 11.

Senator Long was not here today to answer Mayor Walmsley's statement. He was still in Baton Rouge waiting for Gov. Oscar K. Allen to sign the twenty-seven bills by which Louisiana will be changed from a democracy to an authoritarian state, with its senior senator holding the reins.

No Occasion for Speed.

No occasion exists for speed in signing the bills because the constitution of the state provides that laws adopted by the legislature shall become effective twenty days after adjournment of the session which enacts them The new laws, therefore, will be in effect before primary day.

The matter of chief immediate concern in New Orleans was the city investigation which the legislature authorized by concurrent resolution. This investigation, Mayor Walmsley charged, was inspired by the two-fold purpose of giving Long privileged material for campaign speeches and diverting attention from the real purpose of the special session just ended, which, he said, was to center autocratic power in the hands of the governor, whom Long controls.

See Plenty of Evidence.

That the investigating committee will find plenty of grist for its mill nobody, not even friends of Mayor Walmsley, will deny. Gambling and vice have been permitted here under police protection for so long that nobody questioned the arrangement much until Senator Long decided to make an issue of it.

PROSECUTOR TO COVER STATE IN ANTI-RED RULE

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Neil McAllister, district attorney, said today his projected injunction action against sympathizers of radicalism would be state-wide in effect, covering a far broader field than that of the four film stars whose names have been linked with McAllister's investigation of communistic activity.

McAllister said he would go into court "before another ten days" with a petition to enjoin the right to contribute to or advocate any form of subversive activity threatening established government.

Violations would place the offender in contempt of court and subject to punishment without jury trial.

Despite the actor's assertion he was "against all isms except Americanism," the injunction petition, McAllister stated, will include the name of James Cagney, portrayer of hard boiled film types.

"Why doesn't this man in Sacramento [McAllister] find out about things before he talks so much?" Dolores Del Rio asked. "I don't know anything about any cause or causes and certainly wouldn't give money to anything I didn't know about. I know where all my money goes except what I pay for taxes."

120 Die, Hundreds Hurt by Severe Floods in Japan

TOKIO, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Disastrous floods in the Yalu valley have caused the deaths of 120 persons, Japanese officials announced today. Several hundred were injured. It was estimated that about 700 homes were destroyed. About 8,000 homes are inundated, and it was reported that heavy rains are continuing.

WARDEN BLAMES PONTIAC RIOT ON DELIVERY PLOT

Pontiac, Ill., Aug. 19.—(AP)—The rioting which left one man dead, 23 injured, and state property worth $50,000 destroyed yesterday at the Illinois state reformatory was the result of a general prison delivery plot, Warden O. H. Lewis said today.

The warden, under direction of A. L. Bowen, director of the state department of public welfare, spent last night and today investigating the riot. Every guard on duty was questioned and questioning was begun of inmates involved in the riot. A report will be made to Gov. Horner.

Evidence so far gathered, the two investigators said, indicated that between twenty and twenty-five of the "tougher" prisoners in the south and west cell houses were the nucleus of the conspiracy. Bowen declared the ringleaders were prisoners recently transferred to Pontiac from the Joliet and Stateville prisons under terms of the new prison classification laws.

Starts in Fist Fight.

The riot broke out when two prisoners began a fist fight as the inmates were watching a baseball game between the prison and a Springfield, Ill., team. Guards attempted to separate the fighters, but prisoners attacked the guards and within a few minutes were tearing through the grounds, breaking into buildings and destroying stored materials, and screaming, shouting and throwing stones. It is believed the fist fight was a performance staged to begin the riot.

Guards afterward said most of the 2,400 inmates took no part in the riot. The majority was marched away from the baseball diamond and more than 2,000 were seated along the walls under the eyes of guards until the cell houses could be opened.

Guards Fire Into Mob.

A concerted rush at the southern wall of the prison by a comparatively small band of the convicts led to a warning volley over their heads fired from rifles of the guards. When this failed to check the rush, a volley was fired directly at the mob. Most of the injuries were bruises and gunshot wounds in the legs.

A small group took refuge in the prison print shop. Seeing their fight was hopeless, they set fire to the building and surrendered. The shop, with its stored materials, was destroyed. Much of the state's printing has been done there.

Two Groups of Plotters.

"This group hoped that the other inmates would join them," Lewis said, "but as a matter of fact all those confined in the north cell house and most of those in the two others remained aloof and we had to deal only with a few hundred. Most of these quit quickly.

"Apparently, from what we learned today, there were two groups of plotters, one whose object was merely to cause trouble and do as much damage as possible, the other which wanted to promote a general outbreak that would make escape possible. The scheme had been under discussion a week, it appears."

Two Seriously Wounded.

The prisoner slain was Leo Pielik, 24, sentenced to one to ten years in 1932 from Chicago for larceny. A jury was sworn in today for an inquest into his death. Two others, Elmer Hawkins, 23, of La Salle, Ill., and Stanley Gall, 20, of Chicago, were seriously wounded, but Lewis said today that physicians expected both to recover. Roy K. Shepherd, the guard most severely injured in the rioting, was released from the hospital today.

Lewis said the names of the two who began the fight were known, but declined to make them public. Most of the ringleaders, he said, also have been identified.

"Give me but the liberty of the press and I will give to the minister a venal house of peers. I will give him a corrupt and servile house of commons. I will give him the full swing of the patronage of office. I will give him the whole host of ministerial influence. I will give him all the power that place can confer upon him, to purchase up submission and overawe resistance; and yet, armed with the liberty of the press, I will go forth to meet him undismayed. I will attack the mighty fabric of that mightier engine. I will shake down from its height corruption and bury it beneath the ruins of the abuses it was meant to shelter."

—Richard Brinsley Sheridan.

JOIN A PATRIOTIC ORGANIZATION.

Attention was here called the other day to the rising tide of loyal Americanism. There has been no doubt in our minds that the overwhelming majority of the American people cherish the fundamental principles of our republic. We have never feared that, fairly presented, discussed, and deliberated upon, the issue which lies at the base of the self-styled New Deal would be in doubt; that, in other words, its distorted picture of the experience of the American people under their institutions offered by the prophets of the new dispensation would be approved; that their declaration that the American experiment had failed would be acknowledged, or that their invitation to revolutionize the American system would be accepted. But the great body of loyal Americans has been inarticulate and its will unorganized and still is largely at this stage.

In such a situation the power of an articulate and purposeful minority is out of all proportion to its political representation or its social significance, and this power has been vastly increased by the possession of public office. The situation is unique in American history and in that sense only the New Deal is new. In the old world governments and systems of government and social organizations have been overthrown by minorities, very small minorities, by palace revolutions or coups d'état, by seizures of power in the conspiracies of groups. But the United States has known nothing of these overturns, and indeed its institutions were devised and established to prevent them. But in the circumstances of acute economic maladjustment, financial crisis, and widespread social suffering and disorganization a political régime has been able to take over the powers of government and legislation and to embark upon a program which was not presented to the people for their consideration and approval in the American process of popular self-government.

In the election which put the present administration in office there was no definite and understandable proposal for a revolutionary transformation of the American system, and had there been we are confident it would have been overwhelmingly rejected. What was thought to have happened was what has happened often in the ordinary processes of American politics—the removal of one party from office and the substitution of another party, the principles of which were assumed from its past pronouncements. What resulted was the unforeseen repudiation of doctrines for which the party elected to office had cherished from its foundation, the relegation of its accepted representatives to the background, and the substitution in places of actual influence and power of individuals hitherto unknown to the general public, holding views and purposes incompatible with the basic principles of the party. Certainly the majority voters assumed that the party they put in power would be governed by its traditional principles and not repudiate them as it has done without mandate or notice to the electorate. Certainly they had no intention of signing a blank check.

The situation thus created is anomalous in our history and could occur only in circumstances of confusion and public emergency. It can be corrected only by the organization of all loyalists for the preservation of the institutions and principles they cherish. This happily has at last begun, and all Americans, regardless of their past party affiliations, which indeed the existing administration has made meaningless, should take active part in this American procedure. There already have appeared various organizations that are pledged to the defense and restoration of American institutions and principles, such as the American Legion and auxiliary, the Civil Legion, the American Alliance of the United States, the American Security league, the Elks, the Crusaders, the Minute Men of America, the National Civic federation, and other special patriotic societies of more or less strength, some of which in their present stage we are not in a position to indorse. But loyal citizens ought to join one or more of these efforts to express loyal sentiment and conviction. Only by so doing can the widespread and potentially powerful opposition to subversive propaganda and revolutionary measures be made effectual. That it will be effectual we have no doubt, but not without the deliberate and sustained organization of the political force of loyalty throughout the nation.

"OUR REVOLUTION."

In an article appearing in the Philadelphia Bulletin Mrs. Roosevelt prophesies that "if our government offices are not held in the next few years by men and women with new conceptions of public service, then our revolution may not continue to be bloodless and changes may not come gradually, as they are coming now, but violently and suddenly, as they have come in the past in France and in Russia, and we will go back before we gather up the pieces and go forward again."

Mr. Roosevelt in the foreword of his book, "On Our Way," was less forthright. "Some people," he wrote, "have sought to describe that policy (the new public policy for which his book, he informs us, sets forth the milestones of achievement) as revolutionary. Perhaps it is." The "perhaps" seems to have disappeared, at least for his consort, and as the President wrote his book to set the landmarks of "achievement" we must conclude that both agree "our revolution" is on the way.

THE GORGEOUS MALE.

Men are invading the fashion page.

They tell us that they are now wearing such colorful styles as would arouse the envy of a peacock. Fawn and light blue shades for both coat and trousers are being featured; so are blue mess jackets, or full white jackets with evening wear, and light and sporty pith helmets for the summer headgear.

There may be a variety of reasons for the masculine half asserting its old right to outshine the ladies in brilliant habiliments.

Because the right is an old one. The dandies of the courts of Europe always far outshone the ladies in colorful costumes. George Washington, Alexander Hamilton, and other strongly masculine revolutionary leaders wore ruffles, fancy cuffs, and brightly colored breeches. Even the stern Oliver Cromwell had to button dainty lace cuffs back on his sleeves so they wouldn't get in his soup.

And nature took a hand in this long before man. The peacock's brilliant plumage overwhelms the drab colors of his mate; the male lion is the one in that family to wear the magnificent mane. Most of the animal kingdom follows this rule. So why not the male of the genus homo sapiens? Perhaps there is only enough money in the family these days to buy clothes for one. And, since the women seem to be giving up wearing clothes, it is only natural for the men to start wearing them.

THE P. O. STILL BREAKING THE LAW.

Mail trucks of the postoffice department continue to rumble over the pavements of the city, equipped with solid rubber tires. More than a year ago Postmaster Ernest Kruetgen promised that all the trucks would be equipped with pneumatic tires.

Some of them have been, it is true. Postmaster Kruetgen apparently has done his best to have Washington authorize the expenditures necessary to complete the job. But, despite the months that have passed since then, it has not been done.

In 1931 the Illinois legislature passed a law providing that no motor vehicle shall be driven faster than 10 miles an hour on any public thoroughfare unless it is equipped with pneumatic tires. Mail trucks must travel faster than that speed in order to maintain their schedules. For three years THE TRIBUNE has called attention to this flagrant disregard for the laws of this state.

The police seem to be helpless. How can a government command respect from the citizens of Illinois when a government agency shows no respect for the laws of this state?

TWO COSTLY EXPERIMENTS.

Seven months of repeal of the Eighteenth amendment have netted the treasury of the United States $184,923,535.45. That represents the taxes collected on beer, hard liquors, and wines.

Under the noble experiment this vast sum would have gone into the hands of bootleggers and gangsters. It would have been used to fight and defy government.

Fortunately, the people of America saw the folly of that costly experiment and put a stop to it. They saw that it was impossible of enforcement, was enriching the enemies of government, and, worst of all, was bringing about a loss of faith and a contempt for all government.

Right now the nation is in the throes of a second costly experiment—an experiment called NRA. That experiment, too, is costing the nation money and is bringing about a loss of faith in all government.

One wonders how long it will be before the people see the folly of this second costly experiment and put a stop to it.

Editorial of the Day

[Marshalltown, Ia., News.]

We are in receipt of a communication from the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation in Washington "prepared exclusively for newspapers in county seats." We are expected to publish it and return a clipping in a franked envelope to the publicity bureau in Washington.

Among other things, the chairman, Leo T. Crowley, is quoted as saying: "The Federal Deposit Insurance corporation is just what the name implies. It is an insurance organization insuring deposits in banks. This protection is paid for by the banks. . . ." We will pause right here! What Chairman Crowley should say is that the "protection" is paid for by the depositors lucky enough to have sound and able management at the head of their affairs. The sound banks [depositors and stockholders] carry the weak and poorly managed banks on the old, unsound mutual assessment insurance theory.

It all works out fine for the depositor whose bank fails first or the insured man lucky enough to die first. But when losses pile up faster than the assessment members can absorb them—what then? If this scheme had been in operation in Chicago a few years ago it would have dragged every bank in that town down to receivership.

It is not going to do Mr. Crowley any good to "point with pride" to the record of the first bank closed. Of course, the depositors were paid up to the limit. The first men to die under a mutual assessment life insurance plan were paid, too.

The principle is unsound, like most of the catch-all devices of the brain trust, and we do not believe it is going to help matters for the chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation to attempt to deceive the people in this his first release to "newspapers in county seats" as to the real facts. There is a day of reckoning ahead for this scheme. It may not come this year or next, but it is coming unless the basic principle is changed.

SOMETHING MORE.

No primrose ever waited by the river
To be than flowering primrose something more,
No crannied wall has held a blown bud ever
Aspiring to a share in wisdom's store;
But in a wall of bone and blood a-quiver
A rooted flower is reaching for its wings;
The captive heart would be on Love's lips ever;
It hears one Poet while each poet sings.

THAT PLAN TO TRY OUT on Gaar Williams' Glencoe squirrels what purported to be chinquapins went awry. Gaar placed the acorn-appearing articles under a tree and sat down at a distance to await results. Meantime he was called into the house for a minute. When he returned he found only hulls with the kernels gone. In the distance were disappearing a squirrel and a chipmunk. Now he wonders which ate the chinquapins, if they were chinquapins. In the Wake-Line's yard to our Evanston cottage there are no chipmunks. So perhaps we'll have something to report if we ever can find time to watch the squirrels.

TREATMENT OF PARKINSON'S DISEASE.

MORE than one hundred years ago James Parkinson, an English physician, published "An Essay on Shaking Palsy." The work was destined to become famous, as it described with great accuracy a sequence of symptoms having their origin in the nervous system. Since his time the disease has been known as Parkinson's disease or Parkinsonism.

Quite recently the development of Parkinsonism has been observed as one of the distressing sequels of encephalitis. The condition is characterized by weakness, rigidity of the muscles, and involuntary tremors. Occasionally there is muscular rigidity without tremor or, more rarely, tremor without muscular rigidity. There is at first a marked weakness and stiffness interfering with movements of the fingers. As a rule, the disease progresses gradually, oftimes increasing in severity, and later appearing in other parts of the body. The facial expression of those afflicted becomes dull and does not change with joy, sorrow, or anger.

There are many drugs closely related as to their plant origin that are similar in action. For example, atropine, hyocine, stramonium, and scopolamine are so related, and drugs of this group have been found to be useful in the treatment of Parkinson's disease. In 1926 two French investigators described the excellent results that they had obtained through the use of stramonium, which contains both atropine and hyocine. Accurate observations proved that stramonium was more effective than hyocine alone in improving the mental as well as the physical status of the patient.

Arthur F. Hurst, writing in the London Lancet, points out that victims of Parkinson's disease deserve much more vigorous treatment than they usually receive. He details his experience with the type of Parkinsonism that sometimes follows encephalitis. For the last twenty years he has used hyocine or tincture of stramonium combined with pilocarpine. The dosage, at first low, is gradually increased until the symptoms begin to abate.

The results have been most satisfactory, according to Hurst. Although the tremor was not completely controled in a" cases, it was so much relieved that many patients were able to function with reasonable comfort. In every case improvement occurred, and in some cases the whole life of the patient was made much more useful and happy.

Hurst emphasizes the necessity of explaining to the patient the nature of his disease and insisting upon his cooperation. He points out that as the body becomes less active signs of mental laziness develop and that the patient must be encouraged to do things for himself. He says, "It is consequently necessary to stimulate the patient to use his faculties as well as to use his limbs. A patient who may not have read a word or written a letter for years will once again read or write almost as much as before he was taken ill, and, instead of sitting silent all day, he will join in conversation in a normal manner."

Under the management of Parkinsonism, as outlined by Hurst, relapses were infrequent as long as the drugs were used in full effect. As soon as symptoms were controled the dose was fixed and maintained at that level.

MAY BE ARTHRITIS.

W. H. M. writes: Could you advise me how to treat a severe case of neuritis? The joints of my legs and my shoulders pain, especially at night. I tried walking in the sun for weeks. I have had this trouble for nearly a year.

REPLY.

You may have neuritis or you may have arthritis. In true neuritis you should rest and not walk. Rest and heat and proper elimination is the best treatment.

PROBABLY RINGWORM.

E. F. C. writes: I have a white substance that forms under my nails. Is this called scurvy?

REPLY.

The chances are you have ringworm and not scurvy.

AFTER STROKE.

Mrs. A. writes: Is there a system of diet or treatment for a man 80 years old who has had a slight stroke? Is he apt to linger a number of years in a state of invalidism?

REPLY.

There is not much life expectancy for a person 80 years old who has had a stroke, although much depends on the conditions in the special case. We have a booklet on the after care of apoplexy that you can get by sending 10 cents and a stamped, addressed envelope.

CAR TRACK REPAIRED.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—[Friend of the People.]—The car track in front of our home is in need of repairs. The cars passing over this track drop an inch in one place and another inch in another, making so much noise we can't sleep at night. Please see what can be done to have this remedied. S. T.

This track has been repaired by the Chicago Surface Lines. It is now in good condition and street cars passing this point in the future will not cause any further annoyance. JEFFREY A. O'CONNOR, Commissioner of Public Service.

CLOSING OF ESTATE.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Fifteen years ago I settled a suit in court over the death of my father, who was killed in an accident. The firm he was employed by was covered by the compensation law, so the amount I received was less than $1,000. The lawyer received one-third of the settlement and held up my share for some months, explaining he had to, according to law, for outstanding debts, court costs, etc. Today the lawyer is dead, my receipts, etc., lost or destroyed, and I receive a summons from the Probate court that the case is not closed or settled, bond premiums not paid, etc., after fifteen years. Am I responsible to the court if the lawyer was negligent in his duties? Was it not the court's duty to close out said case before fifteen years transpired? How should this be taken care of? A. P. If you were the executor or administrator, you can be required to close the estate. Your first step should be to investigate the facts if you now have no more facts than are given in your letter to us.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY HAROLD TATAM.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES.—Secretary Henry A. Wallace is not the only minister of agriculture to get tied up into knots in his efforts to convince farmers that his way of handling a new deal is what they require, even if it is not what they want. His Argentine colleague, Señor Luis Duhau, is at present endeavoring to extricate himself from a tangle resulting from measures initiated by his predecessor and others which are all his own.

When he lightheartedly committed Argentina to the London wheat pact under which he made a "concession" to other signatories by agreeing to a relatively low wheat export quota for 1933-'34, he presumably believed that he was making a striking gesture at no cost whatever to his country, inasmuch as official forecasts pointed to an exceptionally lean harvest in Argentina.

But things turned out otherwise. The wheat crop proved to be a very good one and incidentally provided the government with an awkward alternative, that of storing a considerable wheat surplus in a country unequipped with elevators or of dishonoring its signature to the pact.

It chose the latter course, and the ministry of agriculture has now deemed it expedient to issue an official explanatory statement, inasmuch as failure to abide by its bond is no longer done in this country. The statement, in effect declares that the aim of the wheat pact was to avoid the piling up of surpluses, and that if the Argentine quota had been fixed at the figure it ought to have been there would have been no trouble at all. Furthermore, the report said, other signatories to the pact had also defaulted.

The document has met with a mixed reception. To the average man it appears to savor somewhat of a lame excuse—or at all events one that limps pretty badly.

Having disposed of the wheat snag, the minister has tackled the meat problem and has instructed Ambassador Manuel E. Malbran in London to give an emphatic "No" to the British government's suggestion that a voluntary reduction of the Argentine chilled meat quota might assist in solving the difficulties which the Ottawa agreement failed to prevent. In this the minister is well within his rights, but nevertheless many stock breeders have an uneasy feeling that upon the expiration of the Roca treaty concluded in London, which restricts Argentine exports of beef, Argentina may find it more difficult to negotiate a satisfactory new one than it would have otherwise.

Other troubles which Duhau might have escaped, or left others to tackle, have lately fallen to his lot by reason of the fact that besides being minister of agriculture he is also minister of industry and commerce. As the originator of the slogan "Buy from those who buy from us," he has had to pacify the local industrialists whose ambition it is to manufacture as many as possible of the articles at present imported from "those who buy from us."

The minister says complacently that Argentina tried to instil the precepts of free trade into the minds of foreign statesmen but failed, due to foreign countries' unaccountable weakness for quotas and other reprehensible shackles on trade. This policy, he says, is responsible for the gratifying readiness with which local industrialists have produced the articles which such trammels have made it inexpedient to import.

But now as minister of commerce Duhau must face the growls of the importers, who declare that the depreciation of the peso—a measure which met with his hearty indorsement as minister of agriculture—has proved equivalent to a heavy increase of customs tariffs on articles which were exempt therefrom under the provisions of the Roca treaty.

THE TRUE ROAD TO RECOVERY.

West Haven, Conn., Aug. 16.—Like many others, I am greatly alarmed for our future. I have always been a Republican, and, as I am well over sixty years old, I remember several other serious economic crises, but it seems to me that the real causes of our present distress are quite different from those of the past and that, consequently, new methods for recovery must be found.

In the first place, the United States, as a nation, has almost stopped growing, so far as any increase in population is concerned, and the vital statistics of the various states confirm this statement. This being the case, we do not need to build any additional houses for people to live in, nor do we need any increase in our normal food production or in our manufacturing or transportation facilities, as it is not likely that next year there will be many more people to need houses or food than this year. As a consequence millions of people are unemployed and have no prospect of having work at their old jobs again.

It is also a positive fact that we have lost permanently our export market for many of our agricultural products because of our high production costs. Yet the administration, instead of finding ways to cut these costs, proceeds to increase them and to levy processing taxes on the working people of the great industrial states in order to pay a subsidy to farmers for doing nothing. Our export market for cotton will go the same way as that for wheat if we continue our present policy. Copper is in the same position as these other commodities and great numbers of miners are out of work as a result.

One thing is sure, neither tarif tinkering nor curtailing production of farm products nor printing-press money will bring back the markets that we have lost. These experiments have all failed, and we are just that much worse off than we were to start with. If the administration would use 1 per cent of the money that it is spending on the brain trust to show the American people how to decrease production costs so that they could meet world competition some good would be accomplished; but now our money is only wasted.

What we need is a new Republican leader in whom the people have the utmost confidence, and I suggest Henry Ford as the outstanding American. He has the confidence and respect of more Americans than any two people in the United States today, and if you can put him in the saddle you will do more for us than any one has done since the civil war.

What we need is a new leader, and the people should be told the whole truth about the waste and incompetence of the administration. They should be told that most of the members of the brain trust have never done anything that was either productive or successful, but have in many cases been complete failures in other undertakings. The records of these people, including Roosevelt's, should be made public, and I am asking you to take the lead.

H. E. BRADLEY.

SUGGESTION FOR AN EDITORIAL.

Newark, O., Aug. 13.—Before the war we bought a 7 foot grain binder with 150 bushels of wheat and a 6 foot mowing machine with 4 tons of hay. In 1932 our neighbor bought a binder like ours that cost him 500 bushels of wheat; another neighbor bought a 5 foot mowing machine that cost him 20 tons of hay. These machines were all Chicago made by a leading farm implement company.

It is no farther from the iron mines of Lake Superior to Chicago, nor no farther from Chicago to Newark, O., than it was 20 years ago.

Now, Mr. Editor, the thing we would like to see you discuss in a Sunday editorial is why the Ohio farmer in 1932 had to produce four times as much grain or hay to exchange for your Chicago products that were no better than the ones he bought before the war.

Maybe when you fellows get down off your war horses and war prices to a pre-war parity with farm products, farmers will not have to gather chinch bugs to go to Chicago to see the progress you have built on the wealth he has produced. So far the present administration, like its predecessor, has been unable to curb the profiteers who fatten off the farmer. O. E. COOPERRIDER.

ECONOMISTS COMPARED.

Nauvoo, Ill., Aug. 13.—I am a University of Illinois senior. The economic doctrines as practiced by the New Deal super-theorists seem to be nearly in complete contradiction to what is taught as sound economic principles by such conservative and even minded professors as Kinley, Bogart, and Lee of Illinois. Unfortunately for the Democrats, few men of this type have been chosen to guide them, and as a result that party seems to be plunging into unknown depths.

Keep up your strong and noble crusade for better government and better men in government, as only God and those with their eyes really open to the present situation know how badly we need it. PRESTON W. KIMBALL.

AL SMITH SAID BALONEY.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—What next are the magicians in Washington going to do? First they extract from thin air a huge gold profit. Now they issue at $1.29 paper representing metal costing 50 or 64½ cents an ounce which is worth perhaps 35 cents if anybody except the United States treasury wanted it.

Query: If a one dollar silver certificate is secured by approximately 39 cents' worth of silver, what is the correct title for the other 61 cents?

COINAGE.

ALL GOVERNMENTS NEED WATCHING.

Evanston, Ill., Aug. 13.—I admire Roosevelt and a great many of his policies. However, I am in accord with the policies of THE TRIBUNE. There never was, there is not, and there probably will never be any form of government which will not need watching.

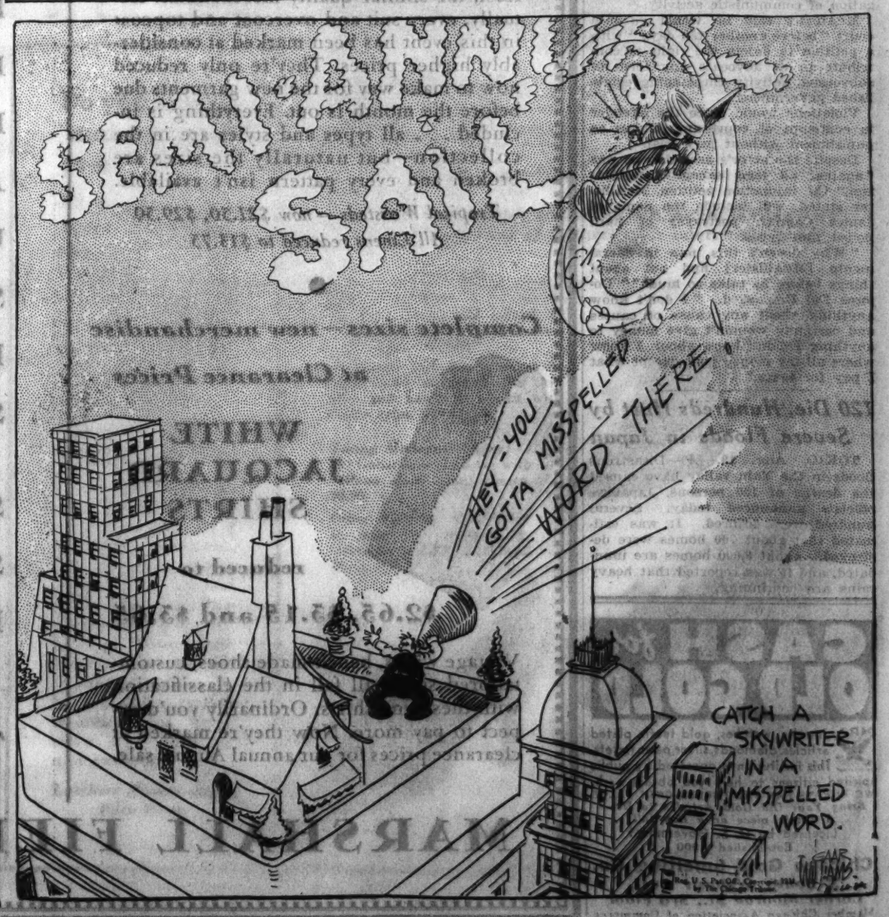
OUR SECRET AMBITION



ICKES' TINKERING PUZZLES VOTERS ON NORTH SHORE

Seek Answer to Political Stand in Congress Race.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.

With the campaign for the November elections gaining momentum, voters in the Tenth congressional district are asking whether Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, a resident of the district before he obtained a portfolio in the Democratic cabinet, is supporting the Republican candidate for congress.

The candidates from this district are Ralph E. Church of Evanston, Republican, and David B. Maloney of Chicago, Democrat. The district embraces the Rogers Park area north of Devon avenue, the north shore suburban towns, and the county of Lake.

Secretary Makes an Issue.

The Ickes home is in Winnetka. The question of his political position came up during the primary fight over the Republican nomination between Church and the incumbent congressman, James Simpson Jr. Ickes stepped into the fracas with a letter which he wrote to Walter F. Dodd of Winnetka dated March 30, 1934.

In this communication Ickes said that, speaking as a private citizen and a voter in Winnetka, he did not believe Simpson possessed the necessary qualifications for the office. The secretary declared that it would be "a wise and kind act" for the Tenth district to recall Simpson, saying that he had given no indication of understanding the issues involved in the national recovery program.

Church denied yesterday that he had "any connection with Ickes." He said that Ickes had not mentioned his name in the letter and that had there been three candidates for the nomination the question would never have been raised.

Church Denies Part in Quarrel.

"I am a Republican," asserted Church, "and I am running on the Republican platform. I have no part in the quarrel between Ickes and Simpson, and besides that's a thing of the past. My job, if elected to congress, is to go to Washington and help to bring the country back to sound Republican principles of government. It's a big job. I'm opposed to this governmental spending and burocracy."

Church declared that he had always been an advocate of economy in government during 16 years as a representative in the Illinois legislature. He said that the sooner business knows the permanency of congressional legislation the more rapidly business will prosper.

There is little doubt in the minds of political dopesters that Secretary Ickes can wield influence in the Tenth district congressional race, either indirectly or in the open. Two men who supported Church for his nomination are said to be close to Ickes.

Backed by Jenkins and Snell.

These supporters were Newton Jenkins, leader of a third party, the "Progressive Republicans," which recently attacked the Republican state platform, and Harold W. Snell of Winnetka, general freight, passenger and immigration agent of the Alaska railroad, which is controled by the interior department, under Mr. Ickes.

Another factor is the allotment of PWA contracts along the north shore. Charges have cropped up that the contractors, their employés, and the government pay rollers will be pressed into service during the campaign. A list of the projects for the north suburban towns approved by PWA follows:

Location.	Purpose.	Amount.
Evanston	Water works	$150,000
Glencoe	Paving	84,000
Niles Center	High school gymnasium	31,000
Wilmette	Water system	117,000
Kenilworth	Storm sewers	340,000

Maloney, the Democratic candidate, declined to comment on the charges. He admitted that if the charges were true he was "slightly on the spot." If elected to congress, Maloney said, the north shore district could count on him to push plans for beach improvements and the return of an active Great Lakes Naval Training station.

2,000 COOK COUNTY DEMOCRATS TO JOIN IN RALLY AT STATE FAIR

Two thousand Cook county Democrats, according to announcements yesterday, expect to be present at the state fair in Springfield next Thursday for the annual Governor's day celebration. There will be no Republican day at the state fair this year, Republican leaders explaining that they had made their showing in the state capital at the convention Aug. 9.

Democratic leaders at Springfield said there would be 20,000 or more downstate Democrats in attendance for Governor's day and word was being sent out for as many Chicagoans as can possibly arrange to attend to form a delegation and make the day a noteworthy event. Mayor Kelly and County Chairman Patrick Nash will head this delegation and will escort Gov. Horner from the executive mansion to the fair grounds at noon.

In the morning there will be a meeting of the state central committee, presided over by State Chairman Bruce Campbell who said he hopes to make the occasion the biggest rally of the year. This meeting will be in the St. Nicholas hotel.

Gov. Horner will make the principal address. United States Senators James Hamilton Lewis and William H. Dietrich, Mayor Kelly, and County Chairman Nash.

G. O. P. TO LAUNCH DRIVE FOR FALL VICTORY TODAY

Begin 2 Speaking Junkets for Downstate Votes.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

The Republican state campaign will open today with two political caravans journeying into downstate territory determined to elect their state ticket and send Republicans to congress in the November election.

C. Wayland Brooks and Milton E. Jones, nominees for congressmen at large, accompanied by Harold Williams of Taylorville, will open a week's schedule of meetings at Taylorville this afternoon. They will speak at Shelbyville and Effingham on the same day.

Francis G. Blair, candidate for reelection as superintendent of public instruction; William J. Stratton, candidate for state treasurer, and Assemblyman Richard J. Lyons of Lake county, will also start out today at the head of another group. They will open the campaign in Carrollton this morning, also speaking in Jerseyville, Hardin, and Alton today.

Itinerary for Week.

The Brooks-Jones group will continue on south, speaking every day of the week, winding up at Mattoon next Saturday evening. On Tuesday they will appear at Flora, Fairfield, McLeansboro and Harrisburg; Wednesday at Metropolis, Golconda, Elizabethtown, Equality and Carmi; Thursday at Albion, Mount Carmel, Olney and Lawrenceville; Friday at Robinson, Newton, Greenup and Marshall, and on Saturday at Paris, Tuscola, Sullivan and Mattoon.

The Blair-Stratton group will appear today at Carrollton, Jerseyville, Hardin and Alton. On Tuesday they will go to Greenville, Carlyle, Lebanon, Belleville and Waterloo. From here they will go to Chester, Pinckneyville, Murphysboro, Anna, Pulaski, Mound City, Cairo, Vienna, Marion, West Frankfort and Mount Vernon. On Saturday they will wind up the first week at Nashville, Centralia, Vandalia and Pana.

Both groups have another week of speaking engagements arranged and will keep at work downstate until Oct. 6, when a concentration of Republican candidates will be made in Cook county.

Plan Fight Backing Platform.

"We are prepared to make the fight all along the line on the platform adopted by the state convention," said State Chairman Justus L. Johnson of Aurora. "The Democrats seem to have no real platform, which may be just as well considering how quickly they violated every pledge made to the people in 1932 by their candidates for national and state offices. What they are pleased to call a state platform is nothing more nor less than a repetition of Gov. Horner's apology for his administration, which he delivered as a speech to the state Democratic convention. The Democratic cry of 'Support Roosevelt' will fool no one."

Democratic speakers will not go out for a month.

LINK CONSTABLE SHOOTING CASE TRIO TO HOLDUPS

Three suspects held in the shooting of Constable Joseph Griffin of Bellwood were identified as bandits yesterday, according to Sergt. Thomas Kelly of the state's attorney's police. Four tavern owners and storekeepers identified the men, Sergt. Kelly said.

Those held are Charles Kunowski, 25 years old, alias Casey; Joseph Piraino, 24, and Michael Rosso, 24 who, police say, was carrying the revolver with which Griffin was supposedly shot. Harold Clifford and Joseph Gerven were in custody as material witnesses.

Physicians attending Griffin, who is 22 years old, said last night has a "fighting chance" for recovery. Three blood transfusions have been performed in an effort to save his life.

PREDICTS VICTORY IN MAINE WILL BE FIRST OF MANY FOR G. O. P.

Portland, Me., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Optimistic over Republican prospects of recapturing two congressional seats in Maine next month, U. S. Representative Chester C. Bolton of Ohio today said such a victory would be merely a forerunner of gains elsewhere later in the fall.

Maine votes Sept. 10 for U. S. senator, three congressmen and a governor. Two years ago the Democrats shattered the Republican ranks and took two congressional seats and the governorship. Less than two months later, however, ex-President Hoover carried the state over Roosevelt.

Although the slogan, "As Maine goes, so goes the nation," lost some of its strength in 1932, Bolton and other G. O. P. leaders seek a Maine victory as a party restorative here as well as elsewhere. It effect, Bolton believed, would be of great importance.

DIES OF HEART ILL.

August Fiegir, 72 years old, unemployed, dropped dead yesterday from heart disease in his rooming house at 2124 Fremont street.

2 LIFERS WELL AFTER RISKING LIVES ON SERUM

Canon City, Colo., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Two Colorado penitentiary convicts here, who gambled with their lives for a chance at freedom in an experiment with an asserted turberculosis preventive serum, apparently have suffered no ill effects from the injections they underwent.

The men are Mike Schmidt, 53, and Carl Erickson, 62, both life termers. They were the first selected to submit to a test of the serum discovered by Dr. H. J. Corper of the National Jewish hospital at Denver.

Erickson works daily in the prison blacksmith shop and Schmidt is working on a prison farm, Warden Roy Best said. Neither has developed any symptoms of tuberculosis after being injected with the deadly germs. Previously they had been given injections of the serum which Dr. Corper hopes will prevent persons from getting the disease.

Two weeks ago two more convicts, Lloyd F. White, 54, and Harry Rose, 55, were given their first inoculations of the serum. Later they will receive injections of tuberculosis bacilli.

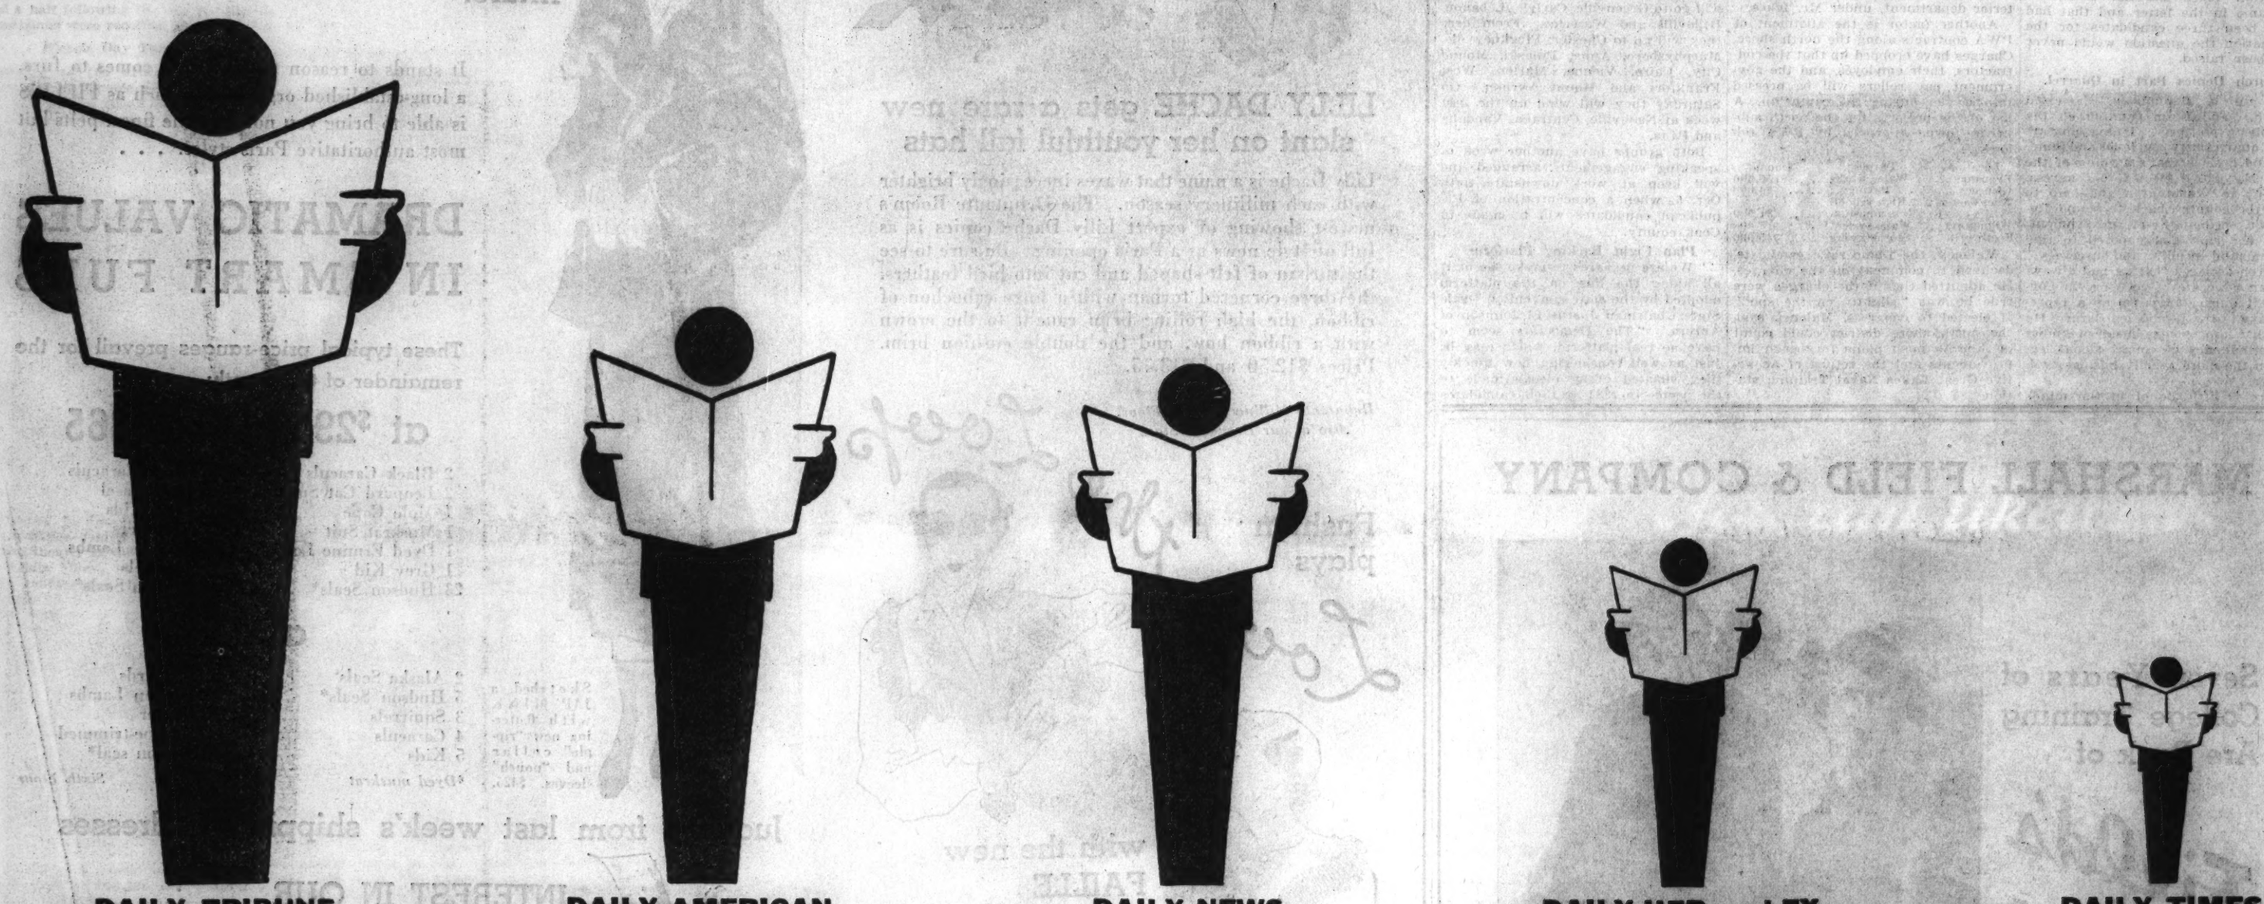
THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE HAS 52% MORE CITY AND SUBURBAN CIRCULATION THAN ANY OTHER CHICAGO DAILY NEWSPAPER



AVERAGE NET PAID CIRCULATIONS OF CHICAGO DAILY NEWSPAPERS DURING THE OFFICIAL SIX MONTHS' PERIOD ENDED MARCH 31, 1934—CITY AND SUBURBAN ONLY

The more you tell, the more you sell. Stripped to fundamentals, here are the principle and function of advertising.

If you can sell five out of ten persons to whom you tell your story, then the more people you address the bigger your volume.

The Chicago newspaper which offers advertisers the greatest opportunity to build volume sales is the Chicago Tribune.

In Chicago and suburbs alone the Tribune on weekdays reaches over 627,000 families. This is 215,000 more families in metropolitan Chicago—52% more—than read any other Chicago daily newspaper.

TWO NEW MARKS AGAIN HUNG UP BY FAIR CROWD

Sunday and Week-End Records Topple.

BY EARL MULLIN.

With ever increasing daily crowds, attendance at the World's Fair yesterday again set two new records.

A new record for week-end attendance and a new record for Sundays had been set when, at midnight last night, an official crowd of 168,891 was clocked.

This figure exceeded by more than 20,000 the largest previous Sunday record, established Aug. 12, when an attendance of 145,086 was recorded.

New Week-end Record.

For the week-end figures, the new total surpassed by more than 60,000 the former record week-end established Aug. 11 and 12, when 277,942 passed through the turnstiles. The new week-end mark is 340,827.

Music week features were the only special attractions to act as lures to the public yesterday, but the routine attractions of the Exposition, combining with the ideal summer resort weather which has made Chicago the vacation spot of hundreds of thousands of Americans, offered sufficient entertainment.

With only two or three exceptions, each week-end at the present Fair has exceeded the paid admissions of all previous week-ends. One of the most important single causes for Saturday's record attendance was the Chicago Music Festival in Soldiers' field.

Through arrangement by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE with Fair officials, all gate admissions to the Fair were cut from fifty to fifteen cents at the conclusion of the festival. In the hour and a half following the festival 17,569 admissions were recorded at the gates.

Bicycle Day Tuesday.

Adding to the attractions of the week will be Bicycle day on Tuesday. On that day all riders of bicycles will be admitted free, and a number of events and prizes are arranged to make the Fair program attractive to devotees of this form of sport and transportation.

Officials are confident that this week's attractions wil be sufficient to draw a million paid admissions through the gates, a mark not reached by any week of this year's Fair.

Century of Progress Notes

THE Dollar club, composed of cashiers of A Century of Progress, will hold a dance Wednesday night in the Bal Tabarin of the Hotel Sherman. Dancers and musicians from the villages at the Fair will provide entertainment.

Winners of the Fair's national square dance contest, selected at the Lagoon theater at the Fair last night, are Sylvia Riley, 16 years old, 3342 Oketo avenue, and her partner, Dean Horvath, 18, of 3311 Pontiac avenue. There were eleven sets, with a total of eighty-eight contestants in the finals of the contest, which ran throughout Farm week under sponsorship of the Reliance Manufacturing company. Merchandise prizes valued at $1,500 were awarded among the contestants.

Semi-finals of the radio auditions contest at newspaper row in Hall of Science will be held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. The finals will be held Sunday evening in Science theater.

A program of music and addresses commemorating the life and work of William Wilberforce, with a chorus of five hundred voices conducted by James A. Munday and J. Wesley Jones, will be presented at 8 o'clock tonight in the Court of States. Speakers will be Mayor Kelly, Congressman Oscar De Priest, Bishop R. C. Ransom, and Dr. Mary Waring.

A joint recital by Edith Rose of Bement, Ill., pianist, who will play several of her own compositions, and Mildred Fash Chritzman, soprano, will be presented in the Illinois Host house at 3:30 p. m. today.

Meyer Fink will be the speaker tomorrow at 11 a. m. in the Chicago Woman's club lecture series in the Illinois Host house.

Shepard Vogelgesang, color technician of A Century of Progress, will give a lecture tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. in the Art institute on "Color at the Fair."

Father Coughlin, the "radio priest," will make the principal address of the Americanization day program at 8 o'clock tomorrow night in the Court of States.

University scholarships valued at $51,000 will be awarded to winners in the Fisher Body Craftsman's guild coach building contest at a banquet in the Stevens hotel Wednesday night, the opening of a four day convention for the youthful members of the guild. Twenty-four model Napoleonic coaches have been selected by the judges of the international contest for awards. Headquarters for the convention will be the Drake hotel, from which delegates will be taken on trips to the World's Fair, a ball game at Wrigley park, and a sports program at the Edgewater Beach hotel during their stay.

JAPANESE PRINCE AND PRINCESS TO BE CITY'S GUESTS

Prince Tsunenori Kaya and his wife, Princess Toshiko Kaya, members of the Japanese imperial family, accompanied by a royal suite of eight persons, will arrive in Chicago at 6:30 p. m tomorrow for a three day visit.

The royal party, which has spent a week in New York and Washington, will come here from Detroit via the Michigan Central lines, and will be greeted at the station by A. Kenji Nakauchi, acting Japanese consul, and a guard of honor, who will accompany them to their suite at the Drake hotel.

The plans for their entertainment include a private dinner tomorrow night at Mr. Nakauchi's home, 5555 Sheridan road; a formal dinner Wednesday night at the Army and Navy club under the auspices of the club and the Japan-America society; a visit to the World's Fair, the stockyards and the Field museum, and a tour of the parks and the north shore on Thursday and an informal dinner Thursday night at the Drake hotel. They will depart at 10:15 p. m. Thursday for Kansas City, en route to San Francisco, where they will embark for home.

FESTIVAL WRITES BRIGHT NEW PAGE IN MUSIC HISTORY

100,000 Long Will Recall Vast Spectacle.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

With the Chicagoland Music Festival ended for another year, but remaining in their memory as a glamorous evening of melody and color, hundreds of musicians from out of town who participated in the festival and the preliminary contests were returning to their homes yesterday.

In the vast amphitheater of Soldiers' field on Saturday night more than 100,000 people witnessed and took part in the fifth annual festival sponsored by THE TRIBUNE. They heard and applauded 12,000 performers, the largest cast the festival ever has presented.

"It was the greatest song fest and drama I have ever seen," Victor Grabel, director of the festival, said yesterday, "and everything went off perfectly."

That seemed to be the unanimous reaction of the great audience. Perfect—from the performances of the winning bands to the songs that Al Jolson sang for them. From the inspired singing of the great Negro chorus to the golden voice of John Charles Thomas, the finest of American baritones.

Unforgettable Spectacle.

And there were so many other things that made the evening unforgetable. The songs of the winning vocalists and choruses, the "Hallelujah" Chorus," the Choral Directors' guild of 4,000 voices, the regiments of drummers and bugle corps, the community singing, the lovely dance pageant with 1,500 girls participating, John Burdette singing "Ol' Man River," the a capella choir, the 4,000 Boy Scouts building a pioneer encampment and presenting a circus of drills, bicycle maneuvers and war dances with remarkable economy of time, and the great fireworks patriotic finale.

These events appear to be just a melange when they are listed in this way, but to an audience hearing and seeing them run off according to a carefully prepared schedule, they combined in a spectacle that was a delight to the ear and the eye. Those of the audience who live outside the city were certain that they would be back next year for another festival. All the musicians who competed in the friendly rivalry for places on the festival program regard the intervening months as marking time for next year's contests.

Perfect Traffic Control.

To the crowd which attended the festival one of the most pleasing features was the ease and speed displayed by police and officials of Soldiers' field in handling traffic. The task of keeping pedestrians and motor traffic moving was handled by Capt. Timothy Howard and Lieut. Patrick Hayes of the south parks police and Otto Jelinek, south parks traffic engineer.

In an early edition of THE TRIBUNE yesterday a picture of the Railway Express Men's Glee club was erroneously printed as that of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Glee club, which won the men's chorus contest. The B. & O. Glee club announced yesterday that it has accepted a two day engagement in the Ford Gardens at A Century of Progress later in the summer.

TO PLEAD SELF-DEFENSE.

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Arthur C. Wilson, 30 year old former Cleveland steel chemist, indicated to officers today he would plead self-defense to a charge of murder placed against him for the killing of Mrs. Irene de Bolt, Cleveland widow, on the Texas desert.

MR. TRUCK OWNER!

YOU BUY A HAT THAT FITS... You can likewise GET A TRUCK to fit your needs EXACTLY!

Stands to reason, doesn't it, that no one size or type of truck will fit the needs of various lines of business, or conditions in various sections of the country, or various kinds of hauling service. Many users have learned that fact by the costly trial-and-error method.

The buyer of a General Motors Truck doesn't have to be satisfied with a truck that only partially fits his needs. He gets a truck that exactly fits his business, his section of the country and his own specific needs. A conscientious General Motors Truck representative studies the requirements and then recommends the exact type of truck that will do the maximum amount of work and earn the maximum amount of profit.

Each of the many types of General Motors Trucks is "engineered for the job." And that's far from just a phrase.... Consider, for instance, that there are nine different engines in the General Motors Truck line, twenty-seven different chassis types, fifteen different transmissions, twenty-four rear axles. Naturally it would be far easier to build a less complete line. But satisfying truck users by building trucks that exactly fit their needs is profitable business because it means profitable truck operation for owners.

Why not phone today and have one of our representatives bring you the facts! He'll gladly stake his time against yours in the sincere belief he has a story to tell that you'll find interesting as well as profitable.

THOUSANDS FIGHT FURIOUS TIMBER BLAZES IN WEST

Lightning Starts Forty New Fires.

Lessening of the wind served to halt the spread of smaller blazes, but on a half dozen fronts from California into Canada large fires defied control by thousands of weary foresters and civilian workers.

The worst fire in more than three years destroyed surface workings of two mines and swept over 12,000 acres of the Boise National forest in Idaho, growing to major proportions in less than 24 hours.

600 On Fire Lines.

Six hundred men were on the fire lines, but their efforts could not hold the flames in leash. Foresters hoped the blaze might seal its own doom by advancing into rocky terrain near Wilson and Freeman peaks and there burn itself out.

Roaring unchecked along a ten mile front, a wall of fire advanced through the Plumas county, Cal., national forest despite the efforts of more than 1,000 fire fighters.

Fanned by a brisk wind, the flames, believed under control late last night, suddenly gained vigor and rapidly ate their way into new stands of virgin timber. Late in the day the fire had advanced to within three miles of the small village of Sloat, site of the Quincy Lumber company planing mill.

All trains passing through Portola, south of Quincy, Cal., were halted and itinerants "riding the rods" pressed into service in the Plumas fire. More than 5,000 acres of timberland have been burned.

So serious were the fires in the Selway National forest, Idaho, that fighters from New Mexico forest headquarters were rushed here by plane to take a hand in the battle.

Lightning Starts Blazes.

Nearly 40 blazes were set over the week-end by lightning, thirty of these in the Flathead National forest north of Missoula. Rain helped men in that section, however, and many of the blazes were brought under control.

In the Imnaha river section of Oregon a fire had spread over 200 acres and was being fought by CCC workers.

Many of Canada's fires were under control, but across from Nelson, B. C., the Grohman creek-Mount Nelson fire was still burning fiercely.

All fires in the east and west Kootenay were reported curbed.

Nova Scotia Towns Menaced.

ANTIGONISH, N. S., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Sweeping through sunparched timberlands, two forest fires were roaring toward each other tonight and threatening scores of homes in Antigonish county. Two homes at Georgeville were burned to the ground.

Both fires were growing in intensity and spreading over wider areas, despite efforts of the firefighters, summoned from a dozen villages and from Antigonish, the shire town. The conflagrations were reported out of control.

Twelve communities were thought to be in danger of being wiped out—Doctor's Brook, Malignant Cove, Lennox, Greendale, Georgeville, Morar, Livingstone's Cove, Millburn, Rear Georgeville, Maryvale, Lakeville, Morristown.

Canada Hail Losses Rise.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Western Canada's hail losses tonight were mounting over the $4,000,000 mark, with scores of acres of wheat and coarse grains ravaged.

Reports from southern Saskatchewan confirmed estimates of $1,000,000 hail losses on crops and property in a storm which swept wide areas Friday night and Saturday.

Last Tuesday $500,000 damage was done by a hailstorm which swept an area ten miles wide and fifty miles long in southern Alberta. Previously hail losses in northwestern Saskatchewan and north central Alberta, chiefly around July 10, caused $2,000,000 damage to crops. Other scattered storms were believed to have caused losses of about $500,000.

The southern Saskatchewan storm came on the wings of a terrific wind in the Last Mountain country. Barns, sheds, garages, and telephone lines were damaged and poultry were killed.

3 MONTH OLD BABY KILLED IN AUTO COLLISION

Six in Coupe Injured; Toll Rises to 762.

A three months old baby was killed yesterday and six adults were injured when a coupe in which all seven were passengers was struck by another car at the intersection of Gilbert and Hill Grove avenues in La Grange. The baby was John Phillip Lazaro, whose parents Mr. and Mrs. Michael Lazaro, Aurora residents, were among the injured.

Frank Garcia, 22 years old, 311 Pierce avenue, Aurora, one of the injured who were taken to the Hinsdale sanitarium, was said to be critically hurt. The others beside the dead child's parents were George Lazaro, 55 years old, his grandfather; Maria Lazaro, 16 years old, and Elvira Nabrigs, 26 years old, all of Hinsdale.

Fail To Stop At Red Light.

The accident occurred, police said, when the Lazaro car failed to stop for a red light at the intersection and was struck by the car driven by Harold Van Valkenburg, 35 years old, of Elmhurst, said to be a Sears, Roebuck and company advertising official. Van Valkenburg was ordered to attend the inquest today.

The death of the Lazaro baby and four others yesterday raised the Cook county traffic toll since the first of the year to 762. The other victims were:

Wayne Stoddard, 33 years old, 5042 Hutchinson street. Died at the Swedish Covenant hospital of injuries received when his car hit an abutment of the Lincoln avenue bridge over the Chicago river. Leon Leonard Maher, R. F. D. 5, Streater, Ill., who was riding with Stoddard, was seriously injured.

Anton Klebosky, 49 years old, 3800 South Homan avenue. Died after being run down by a hit run driver on Western avenue south of 51st street.

Mrs. Mary Eastwood, 56 years old, 1439 48th street, Cicero. Died of injuries received on Aug. 15 when she was run down by an automobile near her home.

Unidentified man, about 35 years old. Died after being struck by car driven by George Moore, 3111 Fulton street, in front of 5445 West Roosevelt road.

Critically Hurt in Collision.

Frank Konnop, 44 years old, 1751 Augusta boulevard, was in the County hospital in a critical condition as the result of the collision of his car with another car and a street car at Ashland and Chicago avenues yesterday morning. The other driver sped away from the accident.

Eleven persons were injured, one probably fatally, and six seriously, in a collision early yesterday at 63d street and Harlem avenue. John Bader, 27 years old, 1644 West 52d street, a passenger in one of the cars involved, was said to be dying of a skull fracture in Holy Cross hospital. One car, containing 5 persons, was driven by James Shanahan, 25 years old, 6223 South Rockwell street, and the other by Miss Anna Freitag, 20 years old, 5045 South Bishop street, both of whom were among the injured.

FIRE CAUSES $50,000 DAMAGE.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 19.—(AP)—A spectacular fire early today caused damage estimated at $50,000 when it swept through the yards of the Flour City Fuel and Oil company at Nicollet avenue and 29th street.

POLICE HUNT VAINLY FOR CLEWS IN BRUTAL DEATH OF SCHOOL GIRL

San Diego, Cal., Aug. 19.—(AP)—The slaying of Celia Cota, 16, today appeared destined to be added to the list of six unsolved murders here in the last three and one-half years.

Although every available peace officer in the city was searching for suspicious characters, authorities admitted they were without a lead as to the identity of the person who raped and strangled the girl Friday night and left her body in her own back yard, where it was discovered yesterday morning.

Search was being made for an elderly man who has been molesting women and girls in theaters. Two persons who live near the home of Edward Cota, San Diego customs broker and father of the girl, said they heard screams about the time the girl is believed to have been slain, but members of the Cota family said they had heard nothing.

FOUND DEAD IN ROOM.

Thomas Casey, 70 years old, a proofreader, was found dead from heart disease in his room in the Gladstone hotel, 6900 Kenwood avenue, yesterday.

CIVIL SERVICE LEAGUE ASSAILS SPOILS SYSTEM

Letter Scores Burocracy of New Dealers.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—The return of the spoils system, with its intrenchment of burocracy under the New Deal, was condemned today in a letter sent to President Roosevelt by the National Civil Service Reform league.

The league recalled that just a year ago a letter it received from President Roosevelt expressed hope that the merit system in civil service would be extended and improved under his administration. On the contrary, the league's letter pointed out, new agencies, bureaus, and commissions employing some 90,000 persons, practically all of whom are excepted from civil service, have been created.

Assails Jobs Order.

The letter also assails the executive order of June 28 requiring some 500 employés of the National Soldiers' home at Johnson City, Tenn., to take new examinations and prove their fitness to serve, thereby opening up jobs for deserving Democrats.

President Roosevelt took the position that these employés were "blanketed" into civil service without examinations under the Hoover administration and that the new order will strengthen rather than weaken the merit system.

The civil service reform league cited a recent order of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes as an example of "the Jacksonian frankness" with which the spoils system is being returned. The order said:

"The secretary of the interior requires that each recommendation submitted to him for appointment to a non-civil service position in the bureau of reclamation be supported by clearance from some appropriate official in the Democratic party organization. Such clearance need not necessarily be in the form of endorsement or recommendation. A brief statement to the effect that there is no objection to the proposed appointment is all that is needed.

Suggests "Clearance."

"In order to support a recommendation to be forwarded for your appointment, it is requested that you obtain from either the chairman of the Democratic county committee, the chairman of the Democratic state committee, or the chairman of the Democratic central committee in the county or state in which you claim legal residence, a brief statement or clearance as indicated above."

Although the President has repeatedly insisted that federal employés were not to engage in partisan political activities, and some department heads have issued orders to this effect, the thousands of jobs in the new bureaus and commissions of the New Deal have been filled on a strictly partisan basis, as Ickes' order indicated. When asked at a press conference last week whether he contemplated issuing an order barring political activities, Ickes replied that it wasn't necessary. He said there was no politics in his department.

In a press conference the next day, however, President Roosevelt said his ban on politics applied to all government agencies.

Aubrey Williams, acting emergency relief administrator, today issued an order prohibiting employés of his organization, as well as those in state relief administrations, from engaging in political activities.

Storms Bring Rainfall to Arid Western Areas

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Thundershowers swept over southern California today, bringing the first measurable precipitation to Los Angeles since June 5. Lightning burned out more than 2,000 feet of Pacific Electric railway trolley lines at Newport Beach and 350 feet of trolley feed lines at Huntington Beach. Redlands reported the most severe electrical storm in its history. Drought-swept Imperial valley received .05 of rain. The Mohave desert also enjoyed cooling showers.

BY JUDITH CASS.

Up at Lake Delavan, where the clocks are never turned ahead to daylight saving and life holds restful enchantment for all of the cottagers, there's to be a quiet wedding the last day of this month involving two of Chicago's well known families. At 4:30 the afternoon of the 31st Henry Axtell Rumsey Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Rumsey, will take Miss Margaret Moulding, whose parents are the Joseph W. Mouldings, for his bride.

Only the immediate families and a few intimate friends will witness the ceremony, which is to be read before the large fireplace of Hyllgarth, the Moulding summer home. Mrs. Milbert Palm of Denver, Colo. [the former Jane Clover] will attend Miss Moulding as matron of honor, and little Marjorie Moulding, a niece of the bride-to-be, whose home is in Aurora, will have the duties of flower girl. Ernest A. Hamill II. of Lake Forest is to serve Mr. Rumsey as best man.

After the wedding there will be a reception for the guests, and then Mr. Rumsey and his bride will leave on their wedding trip. They are coming back to make their home at the Marshall Field Garden apartments, where many of society's young marrieds are planning to take apartments this fall.

The leisurely southern town of Columbia, Tenn., is to be the setting for one of the first fall weddings of interest to Chicago society, for Miss Anne Mather-Smith, daughter of the Charles Mather-Smiths of Highland Park, has chosen to go back to the old family home in Columbia for her marriage to Richard Fletcher Baldwin II., son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Baldwin of Fall River, Mass.

The ceremony is to be the afternoon of Sept. 20, but on Sept. 1 the Mather-Smith family is closing its Highland Park house and going south to open the great red brick antebellum home surrounded by sloping blue grass lawns and shade trees that Mather-Smiths have occupied for generations. Sept. 10 to 20 has been reserved for the round of parties Miss Mather-Smith's Columbia friends want to give for her. For three years Miss Mather-Smith was president of the Girls' Cotillion in Columbia, an organization much like the Junior league in Chicago.

Big Wedding Party to Fill the House.

The wedding service is to be at 5:30, the 20th, in St. Peter's Episcopal church in Columbia, with a reception and garden party following at the Mather-Smith home. Days before the wedding the house will be fairly bulging with guests, for Miss Mather-Smith is having a whole retinue of friends for attendants and Mr. Baldwin will have at least eight Yale classmates for ushers.

Mrs. James Allen Turner of Highland Park and Mrs. Richard Sutton Bull of Winnetka are going south to serve their sister as matrons of honor, and Walter Lineberger will come from Montecito, Cal., to be best man for Mr. Baldwin. There are to be three little flower girls—Jennifer de Bujac Turner and her sister, Jan-Ann Turner, daughters of the James Turners, and Mary Constance Bull, whose parents are the Richard Bulls.

Mr. Baldwin and his bride are to have a grand wedding trip, for they are going to South America to be gone until next February. Then they will return to make their home in Fall River.

Pre-Nuptial Parties Start for Miss Eitel.

With their wedding set for Saturday afternoon in Trinity church in Highland Park, Miss Elva Eitel and Theodore Brentano Bersbach have been plunged into the midst of a pre-nuptial round of gayeties. Last Saturday William Fowle and Frank Fowle Jr., two of the ushers, gave a dinner at the home of their parents in Winnetka, and yesterday afternoon Miss Welthyan Harmon, one of the bridesmaids, was hostess at a cocktail party in the Highland Park home of her parents.

Mrs. Ralph Mack, the former Eleanor Roberts, is giving a tea and stocking shower for Miss Eitel this afternoon, and tonight Miss Jane Holmes, another of Miss Eitel's attendants, will give a dinner in the home of her parents, the Samuel S. Holmeses, in Highland Park. Mrs. Pierre Bouscaren, the former Chloe Watson, will give a luncheon for the bride-to-be tomorrow, and Thursday Mrs. Edwin E. Tullis will give a luncheon.

The bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Frank J. Bersbach, will give the bridal dinner in her Winnetka home Friday night, and the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Henry Eitel, will give the wedding reception at their home on Prospect avenue in Highland Park.

Eleanor Cushman Sets Wedding for Sept. 20.

A garden wedding at 5 o'clock the afternoon of Sept. 20 will terminate the two and a half year engagement of Miss Eleanor Cushman and Charles Henry Gallway Kimball. The troth of the young people was announced in December, 1931, by Miss Cushman's parents, the Arthur W. Cushmans of Winnetka, and it is in their gardens on Bryant avenue that the ceremony will take place. Young Mr. Kimball is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Riggs Kimball of Hinsdale. He will take his bride to Europe on their wedding trip, and on their return Nov. 1 they will be at home at 6 Scott street in a little apartment that the bride-to-be has recently chosen and which she is now starting to settle.

Miss Mary Cushman, who was graduated from Smith last June, will be her sister's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Mrs. Robert

Presents Her Fiance

At tea yesterday afternoon at the Winnetka home of Mrs. Harry Lockman Street, friends of the Street family met James Reid Shannon, son of Mrs. Edward Lincoln Shannon and the late Mr. Shannon of Denver, Col., to whom Miss Katharine Street's engagement was announced Saturday morning. Mr. Shannon is en route from New York to Denver. He will leave Chicago tomorrow. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"Macbeth" Bit Mild as Given at World's Fair

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

The renaissance of Elizabethan drama in the Old Globe theater at the Fair has reached the eighth production of its notable summer with Shakespeare's "Macbeth." The emphasis of the repetory thus far has been on comedy, but now the young Shakespeareans who are the talk of A Century of Progress are strenuously at work in the tragic vein and are demonstrating their competence in bloodcurdling material.

In this chronicle of the dark deeds of an unbalanced dictator in medieval Scotland the people of the Globe are not as completely at home as they are in the merriment and lighter poetry of Shakespeare. Their naturalism does not penetrate deeply into the midnight moods and sinister eloquence of the horrific "Macbeth." They are good, but by no means as effective as in "The Taming of the Shrew" and "As You Like It."

The bare Elizabethan stage, moreover, is a handicap to "Macbeth" in spite of the rapidity of action which it permits. This tragedy, with its witches' caldron, its gloomy castles, its ghost of Banquo, and its clash of arms, calls for all the magic that the art of scene design can supply. Its spell is partly dissipated in the thin air of the Globe's archaic stagecraft.

I imagine that Elizabethan audiences got their thrills in "Macbeth" mainly from the portentous bellowings of the players, and I suggest that the Globe company apply more lung power to their interpretation. Many of the passages of tremendous melodrama were treated too quietly at the première last Saturday night. "Macbeth," I feel, has got to be a loud play.

Carl Benton Reid is, in appearance, a smooth, handsome Macbeth, thus completely escaping from the tradition of a shaggy warrior. He looks, in his Tudor military dress, more like a thoughtful field marshal of the early 17th century than a Scottish chief. The use of English costumes of the Shakespearean period for a Globe theater treatment of the tragedy may be inaccurate, for it is altogether likely that Shakespeare and his fellow players had some glimmerings of a notion about medieval Scotch clothing and accouterments.

Reid's personality is essentially kindly and jovial. He is not harsh and forbidding enough to be a true Macbeth. He presents an interesting character study, however, from a new angle—Macbeth as an aristocrat and thinker.

Irene Tedrow has the rôle of Lady Macbeth and is successful in expressing the feline viciousness of the thane's ambitious wife in the earlier scenes. Her sleepwalking scene, however, lacks the uncanniness that is in the text. The production has a good Banquo in Austin Coughlin, a persuasive Duncan in Donald Gallagher, and a spirited and effective Macduff in Rhys Williams, known to the thousands of visitors to Merrie England as the announcer of the pageantry and folk dancing on the village green.

This "Macbeth" can hardly be called a tabloid version. In a performance that runs swiftly for 50 minutes without a break, the full structure of the play is presented.

"The Pirates of Penzance" will begin performances tonight at the Studebaker theater as the second production in the repertory of the Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera company.

Scotch Plaids Will Go Places On Cool Days

Stylish Outfits Tailored of Thin Wools.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

It's positively surprising how the Scotch plaids get around. Lots of the freshest looking school clothes for very young people are of the biggest Scotch stuff available. But the clothes that will make you blink are the stunning tailored numbers you will wear on the street.

Simple things as far as detail is concerned. Sleek, flawlessly tailored, with circumspectly high collars, long sleeves, and a couple of patch pockets. Everything else is pattern and color. Demure white piqué collar and cuff sets cool them off, however, and a dark lether belt accents a trim, neat waistcoat. Sounds simple enough, but you have to see them to appreciate their rather impudent chic.

One of the boldest combines, in gold, green, and brown color contrast, is illustrated. It is of thin wool, that can be worn during the daytime hours of the first coolish days of fall. Later it will be perfect under coats for football games.

If you have a bit of Indian blood you'll recognize your bonnet by the way the stiff long feather at the back points toward the sky. There are some gallant looking Robin Hood affairs, with a long gay feather swooping down over the shoulder line; some peaked crowns, combined with dashing, down turned brims, with a highly colored feather planted, for no good reason at all, on the very edge of the front brim, and some startling off the face hats, with huge long feathers to anchor the off the face section to the crown.

You will wear a feather in your smartest street hats this fall if you know your hat fashions.

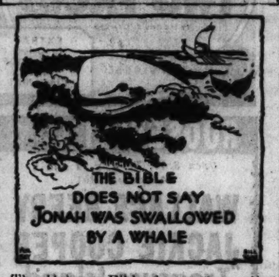
The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph. D.



The Hebrew Bible does not mention a whale in connection with Jonah. It only speaks of "a great fish." Some English versions of the Bible have translated this as "a whale" (Matt., xii. 40). In the French Bible and in many others the original meaning is preserved. A whale is not a fish; it is a water mammal which breathes with lungs and nurses its young.

Who Wants to See "Treasure Island" as Sally's Guest?

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Heave ho, my hearties! Who wants to go adventuring on the Hispaniola with me? We've room for fifty boys and fifty girls, and we'll start our trip at the Roosevelt theater on Thursday, Aug. 30.

If you didn't read yesterday's TRIBUNE you may not know what I'm talking about, so I'll make myself a little clearer. Balaban & Katz have invited me to bring my guests to see "Treasure Island," Robert Louis Stevenson's famous book, which has been made into a wonderful motion picture. The Hispaniola is the boat which carried little Jim Hawkins, Long John Silver, Billy Bones, and all the other characters in search of the hidden treasure.

If you can prove to me that you're really and truly eager to be included on the party, perhaps you'll find your name listed in next Sunday's TRIBUNE as one of the winners. Write me a letter telling me why you're interested in coming, give me your name, address, and age, and see that your request reaches me by next Thursday, Aug. 23.

All mail should be addressed to Sally Joy Brown, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

AS a study in enthusiasm, or faithfulness, or both, we offer I. M. Wile, Rochester [Ind.] merchant, who undoubtedly wins first place in A Century of Progress attendance record. He went first to the 1933 World's Fair on the Sunday after its opening and every Sunday thereafter, hot or cold, rain or shine, making a drive of 232 miles each trip, if we can believe his sister. He was there when the gates closed on the final night. This year he has started all over again. Surely the Fair ought to do something about Mr. Wile—give him a free ticket once or something.

A UNITED Charities worker was describing the glories of Camp Algonquin to a 4 year old who had never been outside Chicago's tenement district. The child grew more and more interested as she told him of all the things he could see and do there. Finally, obviously to see if this place were really the heaven it sounded, he asked:

"Aren't there even any landlords out at camp?"

HAROLD KERR, back from a vacation on Sand Island, a fishing colony in the Apostle Island group on the southwestern end of Lake Superior, tells of the call he made on one of the few inhabitants of the island. He was an old fisherman, and he pointed out to the visitor his twine shed, his dock, explained the operation of setting nets, detailed a history of his boat, and then took him out to show his live stock—three milch cows and a new calf.

"Yes, my cattle are the only ones on Sand Island," the old fellow said. And, still with pride in his tones, added: "I have three daughters, too."

Her Husband's Fiancee

BY ELIZABETH YORK MILLER

SYNOPSIS.

Cecily Marshall returns after a year's absence to the home in Bellchester, England, where she had lived with her husband, David Marshall, the city's leading merchant prince. Cecily had been a shopgirl at Marshall's. Beautiful Audrey Lowe, who had wanted David herself, bribed an innkeeper to swear that Cecily had shared the same room with Audrey's cousin, Reggie Davies, a night they were marooned due to motor trouble. David won a divorce from Cecily and the custody of their small child, Rose Ann. The child grieves for her mother. Fearing for her health, Nanna, her nurse, secretly wires Cecily. When David, who is about to marry Audrey, discovers Cecily's presence he orders her and Nanna from the house. Rose Ann develops brain fever and David is forced to send for Cecily. Rose Ann recovers. Cecily takes rooms in Bellchester, with Nanna, and determines to prove her innocence. She sees Rose Ann daily. Audrey is blackmailed by Mrs. Partridge, the wife of the deceased innkeeper. To get her to leave Bellchester, Audrey gives her a valuable brooch, which was a present from David. Audrey tells David she has lost the brooch. He insists on advertising for it. Audrey hears from Mrs. Partridge that the jewels of the brooch are being disposed of separately. As her father's wedding draws near Rose Ann manifests her hatred of Audrey.

INSTALMENT XXXI.

GUIDED BY PROVIDENCE.

It would all be over by this time tomorrow. Cecily was like a person who is going to be hanged. Until the last moment she hadn't believed deep down in her heart that David would marry Audrey.

Why—why hadn't she accepted that proposal of his? Because it was little better than an insult, her pride had told her. Well, her pride should have held its tongue. David, in another woman's arms. . . .

"If I keep on thinking about it, I'll go crazy," Cecily said to herself, "I'll be in a fit state to commit murder."

Last Christmas was bad enough—she hadn't imagined it could be worse—but she was finding out now. "Merry Christmas!" What a mockery, and yet she supposed she would be saying it to Mrs. Leach and the children. Not to Nanna, thank heaven. Nanna wouldn't expect it of her.

Mrs. Leach had got in a turkey and made the usual mince pies and pudding. She would be hurt if her lodger refused to partake of these seasonal delicacies. Cecily had guarded her wounded heart from her landlady. She wasn't going to allow anybody to pity her.

For whom else could she buy a present? The streets were so full of people, the shops so busy. She felt herself to be a purposeless atom in that maelstrom.

And then she thought of Mr. Dodds, the stationmaster, who was her father's old friend. When she was a small child he used to come to Christmas dinner at their house, because his wife had died and his only son had been killed in the war. They decided, Cecily and her father, that they had to be very kind to Mr. Dodds. It had been many years, now, since she had remembered him.

When she came back to Bellchester he had wanted to be kind to her and didn't know how to set about it. Well, at least she could show him she had not entirely forgotten old days and that she really had appreciated his sympathy.

Her choice of a gift for him was not very original. Men's presents are always so difficult. They had never known what to give Mr. Dodds and generally fell back on a tin of tobacco. So that was what Cecily chose now. It was very good tobacco and she bought a half pound tin. Twice as much as he used to get from her father.

As Cecily got off the tram at the station terminus nothing was further from her thoughts than that Providence, to whom she had directed so many humble appeals was guiding her footsteps.

At that moment she was more unhappy than she had ever been in her life, which is saying a great deal. As far as the future was concerned, she dared not let herself think. She dared not let herself think even of Christmas day, and that was almost here now.

Yet there was a brave smile on her lips as she sought out Mr. Dodds. There was still enough courage in her heart for that. He would be the happier for her remembrance of him, and in thinking of him it was possible for a little while to submerge her own wretchedness. After all, she was not the only lonely person in the world, and although she had lost David she had regained Rose Ann.

Joe, the porter, remembered her now, and that the stationmaster had known her when she was a little girl. His eyes followed her as she went to the side door of the booking office.

There was Mr. Dodds sitting by a cheerful but untidy fire reading the evening paper. He had just welcomed and speeded the train from Newcastle and in a quarter of an hour there would be the London train. The booking clerk was opening the window for the negotiation of tickets. Vaguely, Cecily was attacked by the desire to be going somewhere, almost anywhere away from Bellchester. A pity she hadn't thought of it a little sooner, for while David was away surely he would not have objected to her taking Rose Ann and Nanna for a little seaside outing. But it was too late to think about that now.

"Mr. Dodds!"

The old man lowered his paper and then got out of his chair with an alacrity which belied the rheumatism in his joints.

"Cecily—well this is a surprise! Sit ye doon, draw up to the fire. 'Tis bitter, but we'll have snow before the morning. This is going to be a white Christmas. It minds me of the last Christmas before my old pal, Jimmy, passed on."

Jimmy was Cecily's father.

"I've brought you a little present, Mr. Dodds. Just to show you that I haven't forgotten the old times."

"Now that's rare kind of you, Cecily. Thank'ee, thank'ee, my dear. This'll see me well into the new year. Have a mind to try a pipeful now—but no, better wait. The Lun'non train's due shortly."

An impulse came to Cecily.

"Where are you having your Christmas dinner, Mr. Dodds?" she asked.

"Well, you're going to have it with me this year for a change. I'm back at Mrs. Leach's, and if you come there'll be quite a party. Her little grandson lives with her, you know—and there'll be my girl—I can hardly call her a baby any longer—and Mrs. Borridge, her Nanna. It will be at one o'clock on Christmas day. Could you come?"

"Indeed I could, Cecily, and thank you kindly. It'll be a rare treat for me."

Mr. Dodds said nothing about the ghosts that would keep them company at that table.

"I'm glad you've got your little girl back," he said bluntly.

Cecily's clear eyes met his with a soft appreciation of the sympathy he was finding it so difficult to express.

The stationmaster looked at the shoulders of the booking clerk, and then leaned toward Cecily, lowering his voice.

"That was a wicked cruel business. I went into court expecting to see fair play, and what happened made my blood boil. Do you think Dave Marshall paid off these people to do you down?"

Cecily had not intended to confide in Mr. Dodds, nor indeed had he intended to speak so plainly to her, but some strange impulse moved them both.

"No, it wasn't David," Cecily said. "He believed that I was unfaithful to him. It's the only honest thing about that trial. I can forgive him, now—but I couldn't just at first. I'm rather grateful to you, Mr. Dodds, for taking my part."

"Huh!" said the station master with a snort. "Much good that can do you. Pretty well the whole of Bellchester took your part, if it comes to that. If you ask me who was at the bottom of it—if it wasn't Dave Marshall—then it was the Lowe girl. I'll tell you something . . ."

Then Mr. Dodds related to Cecily the incident he had witnessed on the platform when Mrs. Partridge departed for London and Miss Audrey Lowe came down to see her off—"In a manner of speaking, although they didn't shake hands or anything like that."

Breathlessly, Cecily pressed for details. The information was meager, not much to go upon, and the fact that Mrs. Partridge had left Bellchester was disheartening.

There was nothing whatever she could do now, thought Cecily. It was indeed the eleventh hour where her hopes were concerned. And anyway, if David wanted to marry Audrey, he would do so in spite of everything.

"The Lun'non train's just signaled," said Mr. Dodds. "Don't go just yet, Cecily. After this there's only a couple of locals and then I'm off duty. Bide with me a bit longer, lass."

Good Morning!

"Let's Try Again" is one of the talkiest pieces of entertainment let loose since George Bernard Shaw's plays had their vogue. It is, apparently, a picture solemnly dedicated to the Better Movie movement, and cocks a sad eye at divorce.

"If the home goes to smash, smash goes the nation," says a foreword. After which you become a sitter-in on marital complications in the lives of Dr. and Mrs. Jack Overton who've become tired of one another.

Neither is interested in any one else—but a pretty dancer patient has a flair for the physician and Mrs. Overton's sister's beau decides for a brief, hectic time that the doctor's lady is the only woman for him . . .

The spatting Overtons bound and rebound to the accompaniment of endless discussions, and finally agree on a course of action which the movie shall reveal and over which censors are guaranteed to purr.

Performances are creditable, but, hampered by dull direction and story, and the voluminous and uninspired dialog, the film drags 'til it seems twice as long as it really is.

See you soon.

"Baking the Perfect Cake," a 56 page booklet containing directions and recipes for 48 cakes, frostings, and fillings, along with causes and remedies for cake failures, is on sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street, Tribune Tower, and Hall of Science, A Century of Progress, for 20 cents. By mail, 23 cents, stamps or coin. Address mail requests to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

BY MARY MEADE.

When the pitcher is perspiring and the mercury somersaulting around in the '90s a girl just has to lift herself up by the collar and march herself to this business of eating. May I prescribe a gathering of cold plates guaranteed to raise the appetite at least 10 degrees?

First on the program is a cheese and pretzel plate which is a humdinger of a supper for sweltering beer hounds.

CHEESE AND PRETZEL PLATE.

Chill a good sized plate for each diner. In the center of each plate place a cupped lettuce leaf and in it nest a mound of potato salad. Then radiate from the center in wheel-spoke fashion five or six bunches of the long straight pretzels, thus dividing the plate into five or six sections. Between each bunch of pretzels place thin wedge shaped slices of a variety of cheese, a different one in each section. Let there be Swiss cheese on the plate, as well as American, Roquefort, crimson bordered Edam, and whatever else your choice. Serve with beer.

Cold plate No. 1 was dedicated to the boys, so here's one to try out on the girl friends:

FRUIT AND SHERBET LUNCHEON PLATE.

Dress a chilly plate with a few crisp lettuce leaves and place around the edge of the plate tiny piles of sliced peaches, sliced pears, seedless grapes, cheese stuffed prunes, watermelon balls, plums, orange sections, berries, or whatever the grocer has to offer in baskets or in cans. The fruit may be prepared ahead of time and kept chilly in the refrigerator. To prevent fresh peaches, pears, and the like from darkening sprinkle over them a little lemon or pineapple juice. Center each plate with a scoop of pineapple or orange sherbet, scatter chopped pecans over the sherbet, and sail for the table.

And yet another. For this cold plate use ham cornucopias stuffed with egg salad and scatter around them potato chips and pickle fans, with perhaps a tomato slice or so.

The ham cornucopias are great fun to concoct. Spread a little butter along the two opposite edges of a slice of cold boiled ham and roll it into the shape of a horn of plenty. (You may find it necessary to insert a woodpin to hold the edges together.) Fill with egg salad, so full that some of it runs out the large end. Then chill. These small affairs have a way of making a party out of a simple cold plate lunch.

Whether you've journeyed afar or just stuck around home, cold cuts of meat are bound to be an old story. But an assorted sea food plate—there's something else again. It's cooling—takes you down to the sea, in thought at least. For the sea food plate arrange cold wedges of salmon, fresh cooked shrimps, and sardines on a glass plate. Between these tuck small lettuce cups of mayonnaise. But you don't escape preparing the appetizer course just because all this is so appetite teasing in itself. Anchovy paste or caviar canapés are the proper openers for the meat.

A plate of four salads—fish or meat, fruit, vegetables, and cottage cheese—with tiny crackers piled between the moderately sized portions is something else to think about.

And if you have yet to meet chicken salad on a fruit plate don't be nonplussed. It's right at home there and gives the whole the air of a husband sized summer meal. But by far the handsomest serving of chicken salad that I've yet met is one which mounts itself upon a pineapple slice.

For it crisp lettuce leaves are arranged on a plate and upon them is centered a slice of pineapple. On the pineapple turn out a rounded mound of chicken salad (an ice cream dipper will do the trick, or pack the salad lightly into a slightly greased coffee cup and gently jiggle it out.) Then arrange, in tepee fashion over the salad, three husky asparagus tips which have been marinated in French dressing. Délicieux!

CONQUERING CONTRACT

REBIDDING.

Resuming our discussion of how to rebid a hand with which you have bid a no trump originally though holding a long suit, I wish next to deal with the Rebid When Partner's Response Is Two No Trumps.

This response shows, as you know, a stronger hand than might be expected if he bid two in a suit. If he has no five-card suit, you may trust him for three kings or their equivalent spread over three suits, or for about two tricks if his values are in only two suits. If he has made this response though holding a five-card suit, it is because his whole hand is so well provided with distributed strength to facilitate no trump play that he ruled out the possibility of limiting the hand to a partial score contract even if the opener's hand should have nothing in reserve.

On hearing this response, you may feel extremely optimistic for game prospects in no trumps, nor is there any reason to bid your long suit and tip off the opponents. You have no reason to evade a no trump contract for game. Only if a slam development ensues might there be reason for bidding your long suit.

Slam Developments May Originate in Either Hand.

Having only a somewhat better than minimum hand, you can see that there will be no slam unless your partner's hand is so good that he can make a slam try by immediately bidding three no trumps over your one no trump opening bid. I assume that he had not previously passed, as this response after passing has, as you know, a different meaning and purpose. A three no trump immediate response by him is extremely encouraging, because it shows that he has some honor holding in your long suit, which thus becomes unquestionably solid. If your holding is A K Q x x, you can count on him for J x x x or J 9 x; if you hold A K x x x x, you may expect him to supply Q x or at worst J 9 x, a holding which will give you a better than even chance of dropping the Queen in two leads, or finessing against it, if it is on your right unaccompanied by the 10. Outside the play of your suit, you can count on your partner to supply not less than three primary tricks, as explained in my earlier article on this point. These must include at least one ace and, if there is no second ace, a king-queen holding in another suit. You should now be able to count immediately your high card losers, and, if everything is all right, it is up to you to by bidding the slam. Assured of a fit, you can jump to slam with a long suit where you would have to proceed very carefully on a short suited hand containing exactly the same number of primary tricks.

Lacking a Long Suit, Proceed Warily.

Let us assume that your partner's hand consists of

Sp. K Q x	Di. A x x x
Hts. A x x	Cl. J x x

You have bid a no trump on

Sp. A J x	Di. K 9 x x
Hts. K J x	Cl. A K x

and when you hear "three no trumps" from him you may feel hopeful but not too confident. As you can see, three tricks may be lost on this combination of hands. Your reply would properly be four no trumps, saying: "I do not despair of a slam, because I have two aces and four primary tricks; however, I have no suit length, so, unless you have a concealed long suit as the basis of your slam try, or else you have a distinct reserve of values—secondary ones will do the rest of the work on this bidding—beyond the three tricks announced by your first response, we had better stop at four no trumps." This contract is safe and a proper process of reasoning has made the slam situation as clear as one could hope for without seeing both hands.

Tomorrow I will show how the bidding would go with a concealed long suit in opener's hand.

Fulton of New York, who was in the bride's class at Smith; Miss Helen Bell, Miss Jean Armstrong, Miss Virginia Hobart, Mrs. John de Lalttre [Carolyn Erminger] of Minneapolis, and Miss Antoinette Lackner. Mr. Fulton will serve Mr. Kimball as best man, and ushering will be Fred Griffiths of Montclair, N. J.; Byron Elting, and Frederick Regnery. The other young men whom Mr. Kimball has asked to attend him are in Europe and he has not had their definite answers.

Edward Carr Buddy Weds in New England.

Miss Juliette Emily Adams, daughter of Mrs. Mason Tyler Adams and the late Mr. Adams of Waterbury, Conn., and West Chop, Mass., became the bride of Edward Carr Buddy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Buddy III. of Chicago, in Grace Episcopal church, Vineyard Haven, Mass., Saturday. The ceremony was performed by the Rt. Rev. James DeWolf Perry, presiding bishop of the Episcopal church, assisted by the Rev. Arthur B. Pipeneau, rector of Grace church. Miss Margaret Adams, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Miss Margaret Vincent Buddy, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. The bride was escorted by her grandfather, Charles Bulkley Hubbell of New York, and was given in marriage by her mother. A reception was held in the home of Mrs. Henry V. Greenough at West Chop. After a trip to Canada the couple will reside in New York City.

Miss Gloria Gartz, with her new C boat, the Royal Flush, which was a birthday present to her from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Gartz, is entered in the annual regatta of the Inland Lake Yachting association scheduled to open today at Lake Minnetonka. The regatta continues five days. Miss Gartz, with Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Ellwood, the Henry Porters, Frank Mayer, and Bill Baker, left Lake Geneva for the north Saturday.

Today Mr. and Mrs. Gartz, Mr. Gartz's sister, Miss Gloria Crane Gartz, and Miss Jean Young [the latter two are from Pasadena] are also leaving for Lake Minnetonka, for Mr. Gartz has entered his A boat, Big Foot, in the regatta. The crew of Big Foot will consist of Mr. Gartz, Mr. Ellwood, Mr. Porter, Mr. Mayer, and Mr. Baker. Miss Gartz and Bill Napper will sail the Royal Flush.

Van Gorder Kirks Welcome a Son.

A future Chicagoan was born in La Jolla, Cal., a week ago yesterday, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Van Gorder Kirk and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Howard S. Smith of Highland Park. The baby has been named James Smith Kirk. Mrs. Smith, the baby's parents, and two of his aunts, Miss Margaret Smith and Josephine Smith, are in La Jolla.

Miss Harriet Monroe and Miss Joanna Fortune are leaving Chicago today for Victoria by way of Banff and Lake Louise. Next Saturday they will sail on the Empress of Japan for Kobe, Japan.

Turkey Tracks.

BY NANCY CABOT.

"Turkey Tracks" is an interesting block which was developed by a quaint little woman from Maine, who ventured into the middle west with her husband in 1849. There are other turkey track patterns, but this one has enjoyed wide popularity because of its simplicity and effective design.

Patterns of this quilt design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street, Tribune Tower, and Hall of Science, A Century of Progress.

CHILD'S DRESS.

Here is a darling little dress with French panties for your small daughter. The yoke is prettily shaped across the front, and the skirt fullness at the yoke can be smocked with good effect. In the back the yoke goes straight across, and the neck is finished with a small, flat collar. This and the cuff bands could be made of a contrasting color. Gingham, broadcloth, percale, and batiste are suitable materials.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

The powder puff is one of the biggest little beauty items of all nowadays. When the chamois [remember that?] went out and the puff came in, it didn't seem particularly important; it was just a handy little gadget with which one battled the shiny nose. But it's made good in the beauty world in a large way.

Some of the most attractive cosmetic displays are the cellophane kits of guest puffs, the tiny pads that can be used once and thrown away—an ideal state of makeup affairs. No well regulated guest room or boudoir is without them. They come in all colors and all sizes and they're very cheap. In every shop you can find them, and they're as necessary to beauty as the powders themselves.

The woman who prefers puffs that are more or less voluminous can't throw them away after one using, but if they're the right kind and if she invests in several, they can be laundered quickly and safely. The fat ones of lamb's wool are the most favored: they seem to hold powder well, so that none is lost in transit and they do emerge from each washing beautifully soft and fluffy.

One type in particular, widely sold and beloved of most fastidious women, is manufactured with as much care as any cosmetic. They're sterilized and packaged by rubber gloved workers who use forceps to place them in their glassine envelopes. There are all sizes for your selection and, of course, you must have more than one. Our own pride and joy is a pink package shaped like a sterilizer, with a cellophane window through which are glimpsed six plump, clean puffs. It's a delightful dressing table accessory, but the array of six clean, pretty puffs is even better. And six is about any meticulous woman's minimum, we think.

Hands Exposed to Sun and Sea Water Need Special Attention

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Hands that have been exposed to the summer sun and the salt water are bound to need some special attention before they may be presented at the bridge table without apologies. Let's begin to get them in shape now. Professional treatments are very effective, but often they run into more money than some of us feel we can afford. There are home treatments that serve exceptionally well, if one only will be as conscientious about her self-appointments as she is about the ones for which she must pay.

Hands may be massaged with a gentle rotary motion from the wrists to the fingertips, using a good hand tissue cream while you work. Smooth the fingers separately from the tips to the base as if you were drawing on gloves.

Keep a lotion handy, and after each washing massage the lotion into the skin. A good hand lotion or cream belongs near the kitchen sink just as surely as do the slice of lemon for removing stains and a good pure cake of soap with which to wash the hands after doing any dirty work. And care should be used in the selection of the soap. Always use a nail brush to cleanse the nails. The brush will remove most of the dirt. If any be left, use an orange-wood stick with a bit of cotton wrapped around the tip. It is unwise to attempt to clean the nails with a file, as the metal is apt to scrape the skin which protects the under side of the nail, and leave it rough. Then, the dirt catches in it constantly and it is next to impossible to get them clean.

When you dry your hands take the end of the towel and gently push back the cuticle at the base of each nail. It helps to keep the cuticle soft, pushed back, and prevents hangnails. If you notice hangnails, or in case the nails are brittle as a result of summer exposure, rub a little sweet oil or cold cream into them. Frequent use of hand lotions will keep the nails and hands soft.

There are beauty gloves which do much to improve the condition of the hands. These may be worn at night, as a night glove. They are specially treated to give them a cold cream content. The gloves themselves are soft, flexible, and permit free use of the hands and fingers. The emollient feature of the glove is sufficient to keep the hands soft and white.

Let the weekly or fortnightly manicure be your hand extravagance and have professional treatment.

Beauticians, Cosmeticians to Meet Today.

BY ELEANOR NANGLE.

All aspects of feminine beauty, from the latest wrinkles in wrinkle elimination to the educational requirements of beauty culturists, will be the subject of discussion in Chicago today and for four days to come.

The coördinated beauty culture convention, a four day meeting of the National Association of Boards of Beauty Culture, the All American Beauty Culture schools, the Illinois Association of Beauty Culture Schools, and the National Association of Beta Beta Lambda, opens today at the Morrison hotel.

At the Hotel Sherman some ten thousand members of the American Cosmeticians' association will gather for their fifteenth annual convention and for a review of the beauty materials and appliances show which will be held in connection with it.

Today's session at the Morrison is given over to the National Association of Boards of Beauty Culture, of which Florence E. Harris of Chicago is president. This afternoon Eugene R. Schwartz, superintendent of the state department of registration and education, will address the examiners from 35 states, with a plea for a national examining board.

Miss Frances Martell, executive secretary of the cosmeticians' association, predicts that its convention will be one of the biggest held in Chicago this year.

Mrs. M. B. McGavran of Kansas City, president of the association, will cheer the visiting beauticians with her report that beauty shop business has registered a marked increase since the first of the year and a larger is indicated for fall and winter.

A feature of the cosmeticians' convention will be the three day transformation of an unattractive woman into a beauty, with skilful hair, complexion, and figure grooming. There also will be several hair style competitions and impressive demonstrations of innovations in cosmetics and mechanical devices which further the cause of pulchritude.

MRS. ARTHUR B. HELLYER Tells Why She DRINKS MILK

Having been born in the South, Mrs. Hellyer, popular Chicagoan, is an enthusiast of sports, especially swimming and riding. Music and dancing are her hobbies.

"WHY do I drink milk? Because I have found it true of foods as it is of clothes—the simplest ones usually do the most for your appearance.

"We all know that fresh pasteurized milk is our most natural food. And the newest scientific advice is to drink an abundance of it every day to provide the vitamins, minerals and proteins that prolong the characteristics of youth."

TRY THIS: Cut down on the heavy foods and drink an abundance of milk—you'll feel better . . . more alive. Take a glassful at each meal.

MOSCOW PAPERS EXPECT JAPS TO GRAB RAILROAD

Claim Outrages Planned to Injure Russia.

MOSCOW, Aug. 19.—(AP)—The forcible seizure of the Chinese Eastern railroad by Japanese and Manchurian authorities was foreseen as an alarming and an immediate possibility by Moscow newspapers today.

The Pravda, Izvestia, and other papers reflected extremely pessimistic attitudes because of the interruption of negotiations for the sale of the railway line by Russia to the Japanese.

The anti-soviet campaign of Japanese and Manchurian newspapers was interpreted as a preparation for seizure of the system by force.

Peaceful intentions of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics in offering to sell the line, and the patience of Russian railway employés in the face of many provocations have been of no avail, said the Pravda.

Says Japan Prefers Seizure.

"Agressive circles in Japan prefer illegal to legal action, adventures to negotiations and violation and seizure to friendly settlement of the question," the newspaper said.

"It is not clear why those worshipers of 'sincerity' are deceiving the Japanese masses and concealing from them the interruption of the negotiations and the dangerous results of such a provocative policy."

The Izvestia observed in an editorial that diversion of trafic from the Chinese Eastern railway to the South Manchurian line, which leads to the Japanese port of Dairen, and a series of bandit raids on the railway property followed by "calumnious" attacks on the soviets, were clearly a preparation for "forcible occupation."

Says World Is Not Deceived.

But the world press, the Izvestia added, has "not been deceived by these measures," but rather has indicated clearly where responsibility for cessation of the negotiations lies.

The newspaper asserted that efforts of Japanese and Manchurian newspapers to make it appear that banditry, murders, and wrecks of Chinese Eastern railway trains were the work of soviet employés have been ridiculous and incapable of impressing the press of the western powers.

Special Envoy on Tour of Whole Empire.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 19.—England is developing a farflung project of "imperial defense" underlying which is a scheme to reinforce the power of the British navy with air forces both in England and in the dominions.

Great Britain recently voted 25,000,000 pounds [$125,000,000] to develop air defenses at home, and Stanley Baldwin, lord president of the council and acting prime minister, in fathering the project said that England's frontiers were now on the Rhine.

Visiting Dominions.

It is now learned that the main objective of Sir Maurice Hankey's round the world excursion is to confer with the governments of South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and India about developing air defense forces, and especially to the Canadian government Hankey will stress the need of augmenting its power in the air.

The plan to increase the dominion air defenses comes at a time when the idea is also being put forth that India needs 20 cruisers over and above the British naval ratio with respect to the United States and Japan to defend her long coast line.

Hankey, who is cabinet secretary to the imperial defense committee, left England a couple of weeks ago. His trip is to implement and carry further the results of the famous air trip of Lord Londonderry, secretary of state for air, who inspected the airdromes in Malta, Egypt, Iraq, Baluchistan, India, and Burma, and also prepared the ground for a 60 per cent increase in the present air defenses of these districts.

To Build Airdrome Chain.

Hankey, it is said, will ask the Canadian, South African and Australian governments to scrap some of their customary military units, such as the cavalry, and replace them with air units. For these units Britain is willing to build a chain of airdromes from the farthest confines of the empire to the home country in order to enable the dominions to come to her aid quickly in case of war.

From what is learned here, the dominions are responsive to the urge to increase their air power. The government of India has voted nearly $4,000,000 for aiding civil aviation in India, which is to be under a permanent ministry.

The ruling Indian princes have also promised an independent auxiliary air fleet of 2,500, planes, formed into a unit to be known as the Imperial Indian air service. Canada is said to be willing to provide 250 additional planes.

Australia is willing to double her present air force, but must scrap a cavalry regiment.

South Africa is not so much taken with the scheme to augment the dominion air forces, and is more interested in naval defense.

Corn Cutting to Begin.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

August 19, 1934.

CLARENCE THUROW, manager of the experimental farm, inspected yesterday the major fields of corn on the farm and found that nearly all of the 340 acres of corn will be more valuable as silage or fodder this fall than for its yield of grain. Nevertheless he is going to give certain fields which promise a fair grain yield every chance to mature.

To supply feed for the cattle, which comprise a major source of income of the 1,320 acre experimental farm, Clarence relies in normal years upon ear corn. This year silage will be more plentiful than the grain. Two silos on the farm are being augmented by the construction of a cement silo 16 feet in diameter by 60 feet high. The other silos are 14 feet by 40 feet and 12 feet by 32 feet.

Normally these silos would hold 590 tons of silage, but with the corn drying out before it matures, the total capacity this year probably will not exceed 525 tons of ensiled corn. Consequently the fields have been studied to determine which to cut first, and the corn cutting is due to begin today and to continue intermittently for a month or longer.

An eighty acre field of corn on fall plowed ground will be the first to be cut with binders. This field is near the southwest corner of the farm and has shown a poorer fight against drouth and chinch bugs than the other fields. Normally this field could produce around 60 bushels of corn to the acre. Perhaps 400 tons of silage can be harvested.

In ordinary years, with adequate rainfall and without chinch bugs, 57 acres of silage corn would be sufficient to fill up the three silos. It would take 35 acres to fill the new 16 by 60 foot silo with 350 tons of corn, seven acres to put 84 tons in the 12 by 32 foot silo, and 15 acres to fill the 14 by 40 foot silo with about 156 tons of feed. This year the acreages needed for these silos will be about 50, 20, and 35, respectively, or a total of 105 acres instead of 57, almost double the acreage normally required.

When it was apparent last spring as corn planting was started that chinch bugs were to be a menace, 150 acres of corn were used in an experiment on the bugs. Into each hill one or two soybeans were planted with three or four kernels of corn. The bugs do not like legumes, especially soybeans. But it appears now that the attempt to keep them away with the soybeans in the hills has not been successful.

The beans have enlarged the amount of feed produced in the 150 acres of corn. But the hills seem to be as well infested with the bugs as those fields where the experiment was not tried. Some of the soybeans will go into the silos with corn, while the rest will be cut up along with the corn, or cattle and hogs will be turned into the fields.

PLUTO IS MINOR AS PLANETS GO, SCIENTIST SAYS

May Find More Like It, Baade Believes.

Pasadena, Cal., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Pluto, the newest planet, is rather insignificant as planets go, and astronomers would not be surprised to find others like it.

Dr. Walter Baade of the Carnegie institution's Mount Wilson observatory made this known today in disclosing that his observations with the 100 inch telescope, largest in use, indicate Pluto is about one-tenth the size of the earth, Venus, and Mercury.

Because of its smallness and great distance from the earth, Dr. Baade said "photometric comparisons with objects of similar size offer at present the best method of obtaining information concerning the size of Pluto."

He found it to have about the same degree of brightness as Triton, the satellite of Neptune, and estimated it to be of similar size. Pluto, he said, is smaller than four of Jupiter's satellites.

"We have evidence," said Dr. Baade, "that Pluto has about one-tenth the mass of the earth and if their densities are similar Pluto is about one-tenth as large as the earth."

The late Prof. Percival Lowell predicted the existence of this planet in 1915, based on slight variations of Neptune in its orbit. Pluto was discovered by Clyde W. Tombaugh at Lowell observatory, Flagstaff, Ariz., in March, 1930.

SLEEPING POTION KILLS WOMAN.

Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, 50 years old, died yesterday in her home, 1400 East 75th street, from an accidental overdose of a sleeping potion.

HEIRS TO THRONE OF BRITAIN FEAR SCARLET FEVER, NOT KIDNAPERS

LONDON, Aug. 19.—(AP)—An outbreak of scarlet fever, and not fear of gangsters and possible kidnaping, is keeping the young princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, close to Glamis castle in the highlands of Scotland, it was said today by persons close to the royal family.

The Sunday Express published a report that the princesses and their parents, the duke and duchess of York, were being guarded during their visit in Scotland as though "every casual visitor to the vicinity of the castle were a potential gangster." The duke is a son of the king and queen of England, and Elizabeth and Margaret Rose are, respectively third and fourth in line for succession to the British throne.

Col. Bowes Lyon, brother of the earl of Strathmore, absolutely denied that any special precautions are being taken to guard the children. The girls have not been out as usual on shopping and sightseeing excursions only because of an outbreak of scarlet fever in the district, Col. Lyon's statement said. The duke and duchess of York, like any parents under the circumstances, think it inadvisable to allow their children to run the risk of infection, he said.

The royal family, instead of living in daily dread of kidnapers, are reported to have been shooting grouse, playing golf, and shopping as usual without a single detective hovering near.

Gilbert Stuart Portrait of Maj. Gen. Dearborn Shown

The Gilbert Stuart portrait of Maj. Gen. Henry Dearborn, for whom Fort Dearborn was named, is given special prominence this week in A Century of Progress exhibit at the Art institute, owner of the picture. Painted in Boston in 1812, it is said to represent Stuart's best work. Two important copies of it are extant, one formerly owned by Mrs. Arthur Meeker of Chicago, and another at Bowdoin college, Brunswick, Me. Maj. Gen. Dearborn [1751-1829] was a revolutionary hero, secretary of war from 1801 to 1809, and appointed minister to Portugal in 1822.

80,000 CELEBRATE VETERANS' DAY AT STATE FAIR

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—Eighty thousand persons assembled at the state fair grounds today, which was dedicated to the state's war veterans. A colorful parade and drill competition were the highlights of the day, and afterwards the crowd spent an afternoon and evening listening to music furnished by bands and drum and bugle corps from all parts of the state.

Gov. Horner entertained at luncheon for G. A. R. veterans and leaders of other patriotic organizations and their auxiliaries. Maj. Hamlet C. Ridgeway of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, presented the governor with a history of the 33d division. Following the luncheon there was a parade to the fair grounds, where Gov. Horner introduced Charles W. Schick of Chicago, who recited Lincoln's Gettysburg speech, which he heard delivered when a boy. A. P. Sarver of Springfield, aged 95, it was announced, was the oldest civil war veteran present.

GIRL, DEAF, MUTE, BLIND, GETS FUND FOR EDUCATION

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Helen Siefert, 7, who lives in a world of her own, appears certain to receive the education that will release her from an invisible prison. Helen is deaf, mute, and blind.

For months Mrs. Viola B. Shepard, county superintendent of schools at Bridegport, Neb., where Helen lives, sought to arrange for her education.

Inquiries revealed that the Perkins institution at Watert wn, Mass., is the only school equipped for the education of those triply handicapped.

The institution agreed to take Helen for $600 tuition on agreement that a teacher, to be given free tuition, accompany the girl. Miss Margaret Hosher, 27, agreed to accompany Helen and to spend at least seven years in the work after leaving the institution.

That left only the question of funds. Hearing the story of Helen's difficulties, an Omaha newspaper interested itself in the case and appealed to the public. Last night the fund reached $1,039.85 with contributions received from six states.

INSULL TO HEAR RULING TODAY ON SEPARATE TRIAL

Samuel Insull will learn today whether he is to have a separate trial in the case in which he is charged with conspiracy to use the mails to defraud. Last Friday Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson took under advisement Insull's plea for a trial separate from that of the fifteen others with whom he was indicted. Judge Wilkerson said he would rule on the motion today.

Through his attorney, Floyd E. Thompson, Insull asked that he be tried alone because of his physical condition, which he averred would not permit him to stand the rigors of a long trial. He intimated also that if tried alone, he would reveal "all the facts" pertaining to his business enterprises. In its answer, the federal government inferred that Insull was merely attempting to shift the blame for his acts to his associates.

The indictment, which names Insull and the others, charges use of the mails to defraud in connection with the sale and promotion of stock in the Corporation Securities company, an Insull investment concern now defunct. Judge Wilkerson has already set the trial date for Sept. 17.

PEOPLE WHO VISIT Bowman plants are always amazed at how many times and in how many different ways Bowman Milk is tested.

It must measure up to the state and city regulations . . . and to the self-imposed Bowman standard. So, out at the Bowman receiving stations, each farmer's identified cans of milk are tested for flavor and purity.

At Bowman bottling plants every shipment of milk is again checked to make sure that it meets Bowman requirements before a single ounce goes to the pasteurizers.

Then comes the final check in one of the best equipped laboratories in the milk industry . . . Bowman's "Main Lab."

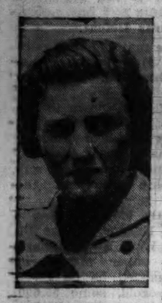
HELEN JACOBS WINS WOMEN'S TENNIS TITLE

Takes 3d Straight Championship.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Helen Hull Jacobs, Berkeley, Cal., won the women's national tennis championship for the third successive year today, defeating Sarah Palfrey, Brookline, Mass., in straight sets, 6-1, 6-4.



HELEN JACOBS.

Outmaneuvering her diminutive opponent with vicious chop shots and spinners, Miss Jacobs retained her title in forty-three minutes of play. She thus became the third player to win the championship three straight years, equaling the records of Molla Mallory and Helen Wills Moody. Miss Jacobs' victory gained her permanent possession of the championship challenge cup.

Except for a brief lapse in the second set, the champion had the perfect touch. Her control was excellent and from her racket streamed a procession of beautiful backhand drives and forehand chops which Miss Palfrey was unable to overtake.

Another decisive factor in the champion's triumph was her service. It carried more steam and accuracy than in any of her previous matches. Miss Jacobs kept the first ball inside the bounds of the service court with amazing consistency and during the course of the match was credited with four clean aces.

Not even so courageous and dangerously armed an opponent as Miss Palfrey could withstand the delicate shading of the champion's strokes and the virtually masculine severity of her game, especially in the first set.

Divide First Two Games.

After dividing the first two games, Miss Jacobs pulled up from 0-40 and 15-40 to win the third and fifth games, breaking Miss Palfrey's service in the fourth and sixth. She won her own service at love in the seventh game to capture the set.

Miss Palfrey lost the first game of the second set on service and then braced up, carrying the fight to the champion. The little star, who combined with Miss Jacobs to successfully defend the international Wightman cup against England two months ago, proved a more formidable opponent and retaliated by breaking through Miss Jacobs' service despite the fact Miss Jacobs burned across two aces when the game had gone into extra points and the advantage belonged to Miss Palfrey.

Helen Steps Out.

Encouraged, Miss Palfrey went on to win her own service at love to lead, 2 to 1, in games. They shared the next four games, each breaking the other's service in the sixth and seventh. Miss Jacobs then pulled up even, winning the eighth. Helen stepped out in the last two games and left Miss Palfrey helpless and demoralized trying to get her racket on the title holder's steaming shots. Summary follows:

POINT SCORE—FIRST SET.

Miss Jacobs	1	0	7	5	8	4	4	—	32
Miss Palfrey	2	4	5	3	6	2	0	—	22

STROKE ANALYSIS—FIRST SET.

POINT SCORE—SECOND SET.

Miss Jacobs	4	7	0	4	2	1	4	4	4—34
Miss Palfrey	1	9	4	2	4	4	1	2	2 1—30

STROKE ANALYSIS—SECOND SET.

	Aces.	Places.	Outs.	Nets.	Double Faults.
Miss Jacobs	3	2	14	7	1
Miss Palfrey	1	7	14	15	0

Miss Jacobs and Miss Palfrey then paired to win the national doubles title, defeating Dorothy Andrus, Stamford, Conn., and Carolin Babcock, Los Angeles, the losing players in the singles semi-finals yesterday, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Miss Jacobs late today was made a cash offer to turn professional by Promoter Bill O'Brien, who handled the Tilden-Vines tour. O'Brien also offered Helen Wills Moody $25,000 to meet Miss Jacobs in a series of matches to be held both in New York and California. Miss Jacobs stated she had no intention of accepting or rejecting the offer at the present time.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Under what rules will the game between the Chicago Bears and the All-American college team at Soldiers' field Aug. 31 be played?

This question is considered by coaches and players as the most important in connection with the All-Star battle. It has been debated by the contending coaches for a week and while decisions have been reached on most points, they remain deadlocked on the forward pass rule.

"The game must be played under the college forward pass rule." Noble Kizer, head coach of the college squad has repeatedly said. "None of our players is familiar with the professional rule which permits forward passes from any point behind the line of scrimmage. Certainly we could use the pass effectively on offense, but in two weeks the college boys cannot learn the best methods for defense against the forward passes.

Players Feel Same Way.

"When the passer must be at least five yards behind the line of scrimmage, the secondary defense knows that the ball carrier who starts on a sweeping run a couple of yards from the line cannot suddenly pass over the defending half back's head. And the full back who plunges at the line isn't permitted to throw the ball over the defending back's head. Since the college boys are drilled in these facts, they can't change over night. To use the professional forward pass rule probably would mean a collapse of our defense and a runaway score for the Bears."

Dick Hanley and Jimmy Crowley agree with Kizer and the sentiment of the players backs them up. These 1933 all-star collegians have high regard for the ability of the Bears. Some of them, Aaron Rosenberg in particular, played against the pros on the Pacific coast last winter. Nevertheless, regardless of the fact that the Bears won all their coast games, the university men believe they can whip the Bears if the college forward pass rule is used.

Halas Can Argue, Too.

Now consider Coach George Halas' position.

"I don't admit that the college players will be handicapped. The players in the East-West game at Soldiers' field a year ago used the professional forward pass rule. Coach Hanley directed the East team and they used the pass effectively. Hanley has urged the college rule makers to adopt this pass rule.

"The pro rule will make the game more interesting. The National league found that out last fall. In 1932 when the Bears won the league championship we played six tie games. Last fall the tie games were reduced almost to a minimum, and more important there was more scoring.

"There has been a lot of conversation about the advantages of the Bears. In general the public believes that because the members of last year's team already know their plays, that the college squad is severely handicapped. This isn't true if the college forward pass rule is used.

Bears at Disadvantage.

"The Bears centered their passing around fake line plunges by Bronko Nagurski and Jack Manders with a short pass to Bill Hewitt or Bill Karr. Sometimes the half backs worked the same pass. The Bears do not have a good middle distance passer. Now if the college forward pass rule is used, half of our attack is prohibited. We won't have an attack with which we are familiar and after looking over the list of university players, we now know that we won't have the same number of excellent replacements. It seems to me that the Bears will be handicapped far more than the college team would be with our rule."

The coaches have reached agreement on other points where the college and professional rules differ. Most important, with the exception of the forward pass argument, is the dead ball rule of the college code which provides that the ball is "dead," that is, it cannot be advanced when the ball carrier touches the ground with any portion of his body other than his hands or feet.

Modify Dead Ball Rule.

This rule will be used with the following reservation: If the ball carrier, in the open, staggers and falls without being tackled, or if the full back or other ball carrier slips and touches the ground momentarily with his knee

Columbia Eleven Will Campaign for Professor

New York, Aug. 19.—(AP)—The Columbia football team announced today it had entered politics. Its first opponent will be a Tammany Tiger.

Prof. Karl N. Llewelyn, professor of jurisprudence at Columbia, is recruiting the Huskies to serve as "a flying squadron" on primary day. He is attempting to win the place on the state Democratic committee now held by James J. Hines, Tammany boss of the 11th assembly district.

The professor expects "plenty of trouble."

"We haven't any dollar bills to pass out, but maybe the students can learn to kiss babies," he said.

Lewis Carlisle Wins Gold Cup Motor Regatta

Lewis Carlisle, East Islip, Long Island, won the Gold cup outboard motor regatta in the south lagoon at A Century of Progress yesterday. He compiled a total of 2,250 points in the races held over the mile course.

Carlisle piloted his craft to victory over a star field of 100, which included Horace Tennes, world champion. Tennes and George Coleman, Miami, Okla., waged a spirited battle for second place, the former scoring 1,632 points to 1,169.

Wins First Race.

The new champion won the first race of the regatta, defeating Tennes, who did not have the best of racing luck during the various events, and Don Frazier, Rantoul, Ill., in the amateur A competition. Tennes twice had holes punctured in his hydroplane. In following races Carlisle won or was well up in the fields, although Tennes roared in ahead of him in the F-1 contest.

The East Islip driver regained his advantage when he defeated Tennes in the C-1 race. Coleman, holder of the world speed record for outboards, was third.

Davies Thown Overboard.

A spill marked the running of the F-1 race, when Bradford Davies, tennis star from Tuxedo Park, N. Y., was thrown from his craft while traveling at a fast clip. A coast guard boat hastened to the scene and picked up the floundering Davies. Results:

A-1—Won by Lewis Carlisle, East Islip, N. Y.; Horace Tennes, second; Don Frazier, third; Jackie Maypole, Chicago, fourth. Time, 4:30.

B-1—Won by Frank Davis; Art Jacobs, second; Lewis Carlisle, third. Time, 3:53.

C-2—Won by Jimmy Rogers; Bob Meyer, second; Fred Nickell, third. Time, 3:42.

F-1—Won by Horace Tennes; Joel Thorne, second; Lewis Carlisle, third; Paul Sawyer, fourth. Time, 3:32.

VAN RYN, ALLISON DEFEAT STOEFEN, LOTT IN DOUBLES

Newport, R. I., Aug. 19.—(AP)—George Lott and Lester Stoefen, the Davis cup doubles heroes who will defend their national title this week, headed for Philadelphia suffering from a stinging five set 3-6, 6-1, 14-12, 3-6, 6-3 defeat which Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn, a long established team, handed them today in the final round of the Newport Casino team play.

Lott and Stoefen, following a U. S. L. T. A. suggestion, teamed up here last year. During their brief partnership they have dropped only two other matches, to Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill in their previous Casino competition, and to Ian Collins and Frank Wilde in the Queens club play that opened their recent spectacular British campaign.

Lott, easily the greatest doubles player in the world, was in his usual form, but he found his erratic partner much too heavy a load to carry. Allison and Van Ryn got all their poor tennis out of their systems in the first set and improved steadily as the match proceeded.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Such members of the Bears as own educated or semi-educated toes were given some undivided attention yesterday when the National pro league champions reeled off another lap in their preparations for the engagement with the college All-Stars at Soldiers' field the night of Aug. 31.

The fellows whose toes learned tricks on college gridirons were turned over to Paddy Driscoll, the one time Northwestern streak, and bald headed Paddy, although slightly enlarged around the waist line, showed his pupils he's still able to boot 'em almost as well as he did way back when.

The feature of the Bears' preparatory work will continue right up to the last minute, partly because the pro kickers can make good use of the instruction and partly because Head Coach George Halas is greatly worried about the All-Stars showing up his gang in this particular branch of play. The collegians are loaded with classy kickers, principally Bob Jones, ex-Indiana, and Herman Everhardus, ex-Michigan.

Corbett Heads Class.

The fellows Driscoll had in his kicking school were George Corbett, former Millikin quarter; Wayland Becker, former Marquette end; Conrad Collin, a new half back from Creighton; Johnny Sisk, ex-Marquette half, and Dick Ullrich, who learned his football while playing quarter back for Grinnell college. Corbett is in line to do the bulk of the Bears' punting against the All-Stars unless some new candidate should pop up.

Along with the punting exercises the entire squad went through a torrid three hours of drilling that went a long way to relieve Coach Halas' worries about the lack of speed. Almost two hours of the session were given over to a rehersal of the formations the Bears will employ against the college boys. Two separate teams were picked for this part of the labor. The first team was the same accepted as "regular" last season.

The regular back field was made up of Brumbaugh at quarter, Grange at left half, Ronzani at right half, and Nagurski at full back. The ends were Hewitt and Karr, the tackles Lyman and Musso, the guards Carlson and Kopcha, and Miller was at center. At different times replacements were ordered, such as Manders for Nagurski, Kawal, the ex-Illini, for Miller, and Corbett for Brumbaugh. About a thousand spectators crowded around during the drill, but starting today the entrance gate will be padlocked.

A new style charging machine was introduced into the practice, this bit of rough work being reserved for the last act of the day. The device permits individual charging, and unless proper leg movement is applied will twist sideways instead of moving ahead.

Today's session, starting at 9:30 o'clock, will include dummy scrimmage for the first time. Actual scrimmage probably will not be started before Wednesday. At the end of the week the Lane field will be abandoned by the pros and they'll finish their practice at Northwestern's training field.

BUDGE DEFEATS WOOD, 6-3, 4-6, 6-1, IN TENNIS SERIES

South Orange, N. J., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Donald Budge, 19 years old, Oakland, Cal., defeated Sidney Wood, New York, ace of this year's United States Davis cup team, 6-3, 4-6, 6-1, in the intersectional tennis series between the East and the West today.

SOX SEND BENSON TO BARBER; WHIP SENATORS, 9 TO 8

Simmons' Single in Ninth Decides Game.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—For seven and two-thirds innings today "Elder" Allen Benson appeared to be a hero in whiskers, but before the game between the White Sox and Senators was over the recruit from the House of David was just a fellow badly in need of a shave. He was routed in the eighth inning, and the Sox went on to win, 9 to 8, with a ninth inning rally.

The real hero turned out to be Aloysius Simmons, who raked the Washington pitcher for four hits and drove in five runs. His single off old Alex McColl in the ninth with two out and the bases filled scored the tying and winning runs.

Win After Two Are Out.

Benson, a 25 year old six foot, 180 pound giant from near Hurley, S. D., had the 6,000 clients in an uproar most of the afternoon, but blew a three run lead in the eighth. Milt Gaston, by the Sox's late inning heroics, managed to escape his eleventh defeat. Phil Gallivan, pitching the ninth when Senators made one run, was credited with the victory. Ted Lyons finished the ninth and surrendered a single.

The Sox began their rally after Hopkins and Pinch Hitter Uhlir had been retired. Boken, batting for Gallivan, walked and went to third on Swanson's single to right center. Haas walked, and up came Simmons. He fouled off two pitches, then lined a single to left center.

Thus the Sox took the series, two games to one. It was their final appearance of the season here and left the standing between the two clubs eleven victories for Washington against seven for the Sox.

Simmons Stretches String.

The Sox got in Benson's hair in the very first inning, Swanson opening with a single. After Haas popped up, Simmons singled ever second, sending Swanson to third and increasing his hitting streak to sixteen consecutive

Grimm Given Leave of Absence.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Bill Lee and Guy Bush of the Cubs yesterday were victors in a couple of nice pitching encounters with Curt Davis and Euel Moore of the Phillies. The Cubs scored Lee's victory over Davis, 3 to 1, although they were held to four hits, and won behind Bush, 4 to 2. The first two runs were scored on a homer by Don Hurst, much insulted former Philly. Attendance was 27,000.

Lee, in ringing up his tenth victory of the season, held the Phils to five hits, the first two of which were a single by Al Todd and a double by Johnny Moore which netted the only Philadelphia run. Davis worked courageously and brilliantly despite the depressing effect of clownish infielding around second base, where four errors were perpetrated, two by Chiozza being mixed up in all the Cubs' scoring enterprises.

15th for Bush.

Bush' triumph was his 15th of the year. He held the visitors to one single in the first five innings, bogged down a bit in the sixth and seventh, in which doubles by Walters and Chiozza, a single by Bartell, and a triple by George Davis led to both the Phillies' runs. Euel Moore was a brilliant performer from the time the Cubs made three runs on a five h flurry in the second inning until they added their final run on Chuck Klein's single and Babe Herman's double after two were out in the seventh.

The day's activities enabled the Cubs to gain a half game on the New York Giants, whom they now trail by five games. They also pulled away from the St. Louis Cardinals, who had trailed the Chicagoans by a margin of only a half game in third place.

Hartnett in Charge.

Though the two-ply victory did much to lift the spirits of Manager Charley Grimm, he nevertheless was given a leave of absence last evening by President William Walker and left last night for his home in St. Louis.

"Charley feels very low and wanted to place himself in care of the family physician at St. Louis for a few days to see if he can't get well." Mr. Walker said. "We, of course, told him to stay away as long as he wants to, but he doubtless will be back for the Giants' series, or sooner.

Despite an ailing back and a sore leg, Manager Grimm coached at third base throughout both games yesterday. The team will be under the direction of Catcher Gabby Hartnett during Grimm's absence.

FIRST GAME

Curt Davis waded out of a jam in the first inning into which he had been plunged by Bartell's momentary helplessness. Bartell did manage to throw out Hack, the Cub leadoff man, but his throw on Billy Herman was low, Billy reaching first on the error. Klein then rolled a grounder to Chiozza, who made a perfect throw to Bartell at second, but Bartell dropped the ball. While Davis was wondering whether he was going to have to go through the game without the services of a shortstop, he walked Babe Herman, filling the bases. Bartell was not needed in the next play, for Cuyler tapped to Davis, who launched a double play.

Thus encouraged, the Phillies stepped out in their second inning and got themselves a run. With one down Todd singled to center and raced home on Johnny Moore's double along the right foul line. Walters flied to Babe Herman and Curt Davis fanned.

In the sixth the Cubs made their first hit, minutes after the side should have been retired. With one down Hack walked. Billy Herman bounced a double play ball to Chiozza. In his eagerness to make the double killing Chiozza fumbled the ball, Hack reaching second and Billy Herman first. Klein supplied the second out with a fly to Allen, but Babe Herman destroyed Davis' no-hit chances with a line single to center, Hack scoring the tying run and Billy Herman taking third. The inning was over when

BY FRENCH LANE.

Persons attempting to find the winner of next Saturday's annual running of the Hawthorne juvenile championship race have run smack up against one of those "Wolf, wolf" situations.

Too many times in the past has the word been passed around in the First ward that a "wolf," in the apple blossom clothing of a winner from Ald. Bath House John Coughlin's stable, is approaching.

Each time the alderman's henchmen have hurried to the front, only to find that it was just a false alarm that had been sounded.

Call Goes Out Again.

The call has now been heard again for next Saturday afternoon's 2 year old struggle. This time the alderman from the First is screaming in an unusually loud voice.

"Wolf! Wolf!" he cries.

His first "Wolf"—when translated into the juvenile championship picture, means his horse Advantage, which already has demonstrated that he is as good as most any 2 year old that has raced in America this season.

His second "Wolf" is the colt Official, an eligible to the $100,000 Belmont Futurity to be run next month. Saturday this son of Display ran to the alderman's expectations for the first time and beat a stylish band of youngsters at Hawthorne.

Could Run One-Two.

These two colts actually appear to be the outstanding candidates for Hawthorne's most coveted 2 year old prize. On cold dope one could win and the other could very easily run second. Each is an upstanding fellow, and the blood from our most stylish thoroughbred families courses through both their veins.

Yet there's that old question to be answered. Can this stable, long noted for its high anticipations and for its scarcity of victories, turn this sort of a flip flop and come up with, not one, but two, of the best 2 year olds that are racing in the west?

If one could just forget what has happened to the alderman's horses on previous occasions, Advantage and Official would prance out onto the track with an extra large quota of backers.

Plenty of Others.

Those who won't lay themselves open again for a Coughlin disappointment will have their money riding on such juveniles as Roman Soldier, Spanish Babe, Chief Cherokee, Albuquerque, Blue Lillian, Bert Reid, Hope Eternal, and a number of others that will parade to the post.

The juvenile championship candidates will have numerous opportunities this week to tune up for the engagement in actual racing competition. The Highland purse this afternoon engages a field of eligibles and on Wednesday afternoon the test handicap at 5½ furlongs will bring several of the leading candidates into action. The Coughlin colts, having won races on Friday and Saturday, probably will not race again until the championship is up for decision.

Among the more noted winners of the juvenile stake in former years were Head Play, Hygro, and Signalman.

All-Star, Bear Coaches Fight Over Pass Rule

as he starts his plunge, the ball will not be dead at that point. In other words Referee Jim Masker will have authority to declare the ball "dead" when he sees the ball carrier has been knocked off his feet by the tackler or falls when in close line play.

This reservation will eliminate the ludicrous sight of a runner entirely in the open and apparently headed for a touchdown, forced to stop because he slipped and touched the ground with his knees.

The college rules on the kickoff, free kick and clipping will be used. The college penalty for clipping is 15 yards [25 yards in the National Pro league] and under the 1934 change clipping is regarded as hitting any player in the open field from behind. Five players of the receiving team at the kickoff must be stationed not closer than 10 yards nor more than 15 yards from the opponents' 40 yard line.

Use New Ball.

The goal posts will be erected on the goal line as in professional football. This is expected to increase scoring from the field for Ade Schwammel and Paul Pardonner are exceptional field goal artists, and so is Jack Manders of the Bears.

The new football, which is about an inch smaller in circumference, measured around the short axis, and is supposed to be forward passed more easily than last year's ball, will be used. The all-star game thus provides the first test for the new ball.

After yesterday's vacation the university players will be back at their routine this morning at 10 o'clock. The double daily drills will be continued, and by the middle of the week the first scrimmage will be called.

Mal Edward, Coach Kizer's assistant at Purdue, will join the coaching staf today. He will have charge of the ends.

SPARTA SOCCER TEAM WINS FIRST GAME OF SEASON

Sparta won its first soccer game of the season yesterday at Norwegian field, defeating the Hungarian-Americans, 5 to 1. Dickie Vidano, veteran outside right, kicked in two goals for the Bohemians, and Johnny Greenlees, forward, also scored twice. Vleek made the other.

In a curtain raiser, the Norwegian-Americans beat the Chicago Sports club, 6 to 0.

CANZONERI AND ARIZMENDI HURT; POSTPONE BOUTS

New York, Aug. 19.—[Special.]—Because of injuries suffered by boxers in each of the feature bouts, the cards headed by Baby Arizmendi and Mike Belloise, and Tony Canzoneri and Harry Dublinsky, have been postponed, it was announced today by the respective promoters.

Arizmendi, who was listed to clash with Belloise at Dyckman oval tomorrow night for the featherweight championship of New York state, received a deep cut over his left eye in training, and was examined by Dr. Vincent A. Nariello of the commission staf. Dr. Nariello recommended that the battle be postponed a week.

Canzoneri, scheduled to meet Dublinsky at Ebbets field on Wednesday, informed Promoter Al Weill that he was suffering from ruptured fibers in the tendons of the calf muscles of his left leg, and would be unable to go through with the fight. Seeking permission to postpone the show a week, Weill communicated with Commissioners John J. Phelan and Bill Brown, who ordered Canzoneri to appear for an examination before three physicians Tuesday. After the examination the new date for the fight will be announced. It is expected that the card will be held a week from Wednesday.

SMITH'S TEAM WINS WEST POLO PRACTICE MATCH

Smith, riding at No. 2 position, played with three Californians, George Pop at No. 1 and Eric Pepley and Frank Fuller at No. 3 and back, respectively. The losers lined up with H. W. [Rube] Williams at No. 3, Neil McCarthy and Boeseke in front of him, and Lin Howard at back.

In the fourth of the test matches designed to aid in the selection of the East team, the Blue side, on which Stephen Sanford, Earle Hopping, Stewart Iglehart, and Bobby Strawbridge played, defeated the Whites, 7 to 5. The result was something of a surprise.

Dazzo, Breese Meet Tonight at Marigold

Professional boxing shows will be presented tonight at Marigold Gardens, Broadway and Grace street, and at White City, 63d street and South Park avenue. Bus Breese, Manhattan, Kas., lightweight, will meet Paul Dazzo, Chicago, in a 10 round main bout at Marigold. The feature match at White City will bring together George Black, Milwaukee, Wis., 154 pound boxer, and Wilbur Stokes of Orlando, Fla.

Breese, who recently returned from Manhattan after a flying visit there to see his baby, born while Bus was in Chicago training for his victorious bout with Sailor Born two weeks ago, is in hopes of earning a match with Frank Sigilio or Davey Day, ranking lightweights.

Although the Kansas boxer has achieved an enviable record he does not believe he has received proper recognition. So when he learned of Tommy Corbett's conquest of Day and Day's draw with Sigilio, Breese saw a chance to push himself into the spotlight. He defeated Corbett at Sioux City, Ia., in May.

Stokes' Swings Wild.

Joe O'Signac, Benton Harbor, Mich., welterweight, is paired with Jimmy Wooten of Omaha, Neb., in a five round supporting match. Four round matches will include two between Augie Mandell and Eddie Jackson, junior lightweights, and Henry Fuscaldo and Willie Dudlack, bantamweights.

Beal Meets Levels.

Mickey Beal, 1934 Golden Gloves flyweight semi-finalist to Jesse Levels, will attempt to defeat Frank Mirabal of Argo, Ill., for the second time in the six round semi-final at Marigold. Last Monday Beal was given credit for a one round technical knockout when Mirabal became confused and went down without being hit. The balance of the program:

Frank Knauer vs. Steve Padon [4], 147.
Walter Matthys vs. Sammy Guidara, [4], 120.
Ralph Garibaldi vs. Alex Kassboski [wrestling].

Promoter Sam Abruscato will dedicate his show tomorrow at Western stadium to the Cubs, 20 of whom will be at the ringside. Gene Higgins, Chicago 138 pound boxer, and Geno Salvatore, La Salle, Ill., clash in the eight round windup. The five round semi-final brings together Art Sykes, Elmira, N. Y., and Frank Ketter, Belle Plaine Athletic club.

Buck Everett, Gary, Ind., heavyweight, is to begin training at Trafton's gymnasium Friday for his eight round tussle with Joe Louis of Detroit at Marigold Gardens next Monday. . . . Everett has hired Jack Kranz, Owen Miller, and Pete Lullo to serve as sparring partners in workouts at Gary. . . . Eddie Shea, south side junior lightweight, veteran of 15 years at 28, and Benny Bass, former junior lightweight titleholder, have been signed to box 10 rounds at Atlantic City Aug. 31. . . . Shea is scheduled to open a week's drill this afternoon at the Garden of Champions at A Century of Progress. . . . Tracey Cox, who won a 10 round decision from Tony Herrera at Indianapolis last week, and Herrera may be rematched at Flint, Mich., Sept. 7. F. M.

ST. MICHAEL'S IS ELIMINATED IN C. Y. O. LEAGUE

St. Michael's [South Chicago], one of the two teams to finish the regular divisional schedule of the Catholic Youth Organization Baseball league undefeated, yesterday was eliminated from the championship playoffs as the first round of the title series was played in the C. Y. O. league. St. Mary's [Evanston] defeated the South Siders by a score of 10 to 8.

Transfiguration eliminated St. Bronislava from the title round, 5 to 3. Other games involving strong title contenders saw St. Wenceslaus win from Our Lady of Angeles, 3 to 2, and St. Hyacinth win from St. Josaphat, 7 to 4.

Survivors of yesterday's games will meet next Sunday to determine the quarter-finalists. The divisional softball race in the C. Y. O. league will end this week, with the title playoffs scheduled for next week.

Yesterday's scores:
St. Brune, 4; St. Casimir's, 3.
St. Hyacinth's, 7; St. Josaphat, 4.

St. Wenceslaus, 3; Lady of Angels, 2.

Scores 150 Yard Ace on the Fly at Timber Trails

Holes in one are generally made on the bounce or roll, but C. L. Detman, 2844 West Chicago avenue, chose a new method yesterday to hole out his mashie tee shot on the 150 yard thirteenth at Timber Trails. The ball struck the pin, about a foot from the top, severed it, and then dropped seven feet down into the hole.

ACACIA GOLF PRO WINS TITLE IN K. OF C. PLAYOFF

Frank Garrity, professional at the Acacia Country club, yesterday won the playoff for the annual Knights of Columbus championship, held over the No. 1 course at Olympia Fields. Last Wednesday Garrity tied in the regular tournament with Tony Scavone, Perez council, and Fritz Jordan, Quigley council, with 73s. Yesterday Frank shot 77 to win the playoff, while Scavone had 43—37—80, and Jordan, 42—40—82. Garritty's card:

Par—Out	443	543	445	—36
Par—In	543	434	445	—36—72
Garritty—Out	554	544	535	—40
Garritty—In	543	325	456	—37—77

Garritty's victory gave his council, St. Augustine, a second leg on the Fred B. Snite trophy and himself possession of the Thomas D. Griffin cup. Scavone won the Al Horan trophy, and Jordan took the Edward J. Barrett award.

PICK CHARLESTON TO LEAD EASTERN NEGRO ALL-STARS

Oscar Charleston, manager of the Pittsburgh, Pa., Crawfords since 1931, has been appointed manager of the East All-Stars, who will meet the greatest players of the western section of the Negro National league in the second annual game at Comiskey park next Sunday.

Charleston, who is spending his seventeenth year with the Crawfords, was considered one of the greatest outfielders in the league until several years ago. He will oppose Dave Malarcher, manager of the Western All-Stars, who was named last week.

The members of the East and West squads will be decided tomorrow when the nation-wide poll closes. Seven Chicago players are expected to be in the lineup of the West team. The West triumphed last year, 11 to 7.

MAYNARD CLARK TAKES 15 MILE SPEEDWAY RACE

Maynard Clark, Milan, Ill., yesterday won the 15 mile feature race at the Cook county fair grounds half mile speedway, covering the distance in 15 minutes 19.6 seconds.

Chester Gardner, Los Angeles, was second, and Everett Wright, Crawfordsville, Ind., finished third. Everett Sailor, Dayton, O., won the three mile handicap, with Gardner second and John Sawyer, Milwaukee, third.

Swallows Are Getting Ready to Fly South

BY BOB BECKER.

The man on the flying trapeze has nothing on thousands of swallows on the telephone wires these days. The birds are swinging through the air, getting their wings tuned for the fall migration. It won't be long now until these birds will be heading south on a long flight to their winter quarters. It stands to reason that young birds must go through a training period before they are qualified to take the long trail to winter quarters.

Members of the swallow family have the habit of assembling in large flocks prior to migration. The old birds bring the young to these gatherings and coach them for the southward migration. At least, that is one interpretation that can be given for the annual August assemblies of swallows.

Martins Make Noise.

Along with other members of the swallow family, the purple martins also like to get together in flocks before the fall migration. And what a racket these birds make when several thousand join in an August party

Of all birds which gang in flocks probably the blackbird and the grackles give towns and individuals the most trouble at this time of the year. These birds may disperse during the day, spreading through the fields to find food. But around sundown they like to come back to a group of trees in a town to roost.

Starlings Add to Confusion.

When they do this residents have reason to complain, because hundreds of blackbirds or grackles can make more noise and cause more trouble than any similar group of birds, except starlings. Last fall we watched one of these roosts and found starlings joining with the blackbirds to keep people awake.

EVAN LEWIS WAS FIRST CHAMPION OF MAT WORLD

[This is the third of a series on the history and development of wrestling. Jim Londos and Ed Strangler Lewis, greatest of present day wrestlers, will meet at Wrigley field, Sept. 20.]

Before trying to untangle the championship snarl, it might be well to explain at this point that there are two direct methods or schools of wrestling.

One teaches the pressure means of victory, which is the art of exerting sufficient weight and power to force the opponent to the mat and hold him there. The other is the science of leverage and knowledge of the punishing or torture holds. They either force the victim to the mat for victory, or compel him to cede the fall or match rather than suffer the certainty of broken or dislocated bones.

Pendulum Swings Back.

TIGERS DEFEAT RED SOX TWICE BEFORE 46,995

Take First Game, 8 to 6; Win Second, 4 to 3.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Although outhit in both ends of a double header, the league leading Detroit Tigers won two games from the Boston Red Sox today, 8 to 6 and 4 to 3, before a paid attendance of 46,995, the largest American league crowd in Boston's baseball history.

In the fifth inning of the first game Detroit pounded Lefty Grove for five runs. Grove finished the inning, but Henry Johnson came in to pitch in the sixth. He held the Tigers hitless in the sixth, but was taken out for a pinch hitter. Pennock then shut out Detroit with two hits during the remainder of the game.

Walberg's error paved the way for Detroit's first run in the opening inning of the nightcap. The Tigers scored one run in the second inning and another in the fourth. Rhodes relieved Walberg in the eighth inning, but in the ninth, after two were out, Cochrane got a base on balls and Auker and Fox singled to drive in another run. Scores:

YANKEES WIN PAIR.

New York, Aug. 19. — (AP) — The Yankees' two collegiate pitchers, Johnny Murphy of Fordham and Johnny Broaca of Yale, hurled the Yanks to a double victory over the St. Louis Browns today, 9 to 3 and 2 to 1, before a Sunday crowd of 34,159.

St. Louis errors helped the Yanks along in the first game and Murphy had an easy time winning his 12th victory of the year. He allowed only seven hits, one of which was a homer by Bruce Campbell.

A'S BEAT INDIANS, 9-5.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 19.—(AP)—A determined attack in the early innings gave the Athletics a 9 to 5 victory over Cleveland today, but the triumph cost the A's the services of Jimmy Foxx for at least a few days.

The home run slugger was hit on the leg by a batted ball during the pre-game fielding drill, and was carried from the field. The injury, however, was not as serious as at first feared and Foxx expects to be back in the game before the end of the week.

Giants Defeat Reds, 6-4, in 11th Inning

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Charley Dressen day meant only another lost game to the Cincinnati Reds today as the new manager formally was welcomed to the city. His team lost to the New York Giants, 6 to 4, in an eleven inning contest.

Up to the ninth inning it was a pitching duel between Hal Schumacher, who has defeated the Reds eleven straight times and has yet to suffer defeat by them, and Benny Frey.

The Reds rallied in the ninth for three runs, to tie the score, but in the eleventh the Giants won out. Salveson, who got credit for the game, singled to left, and Watkins ran for him. Moore got a pass, Critz sacrificed, Terry was purposely passed to fill the bases, and then Ott singled to short to score the winning run. Score:

DODGERS, 2; PIRATES, 1.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Brooklyn defeated Pittsburgh, 2 to 1, today behind the four hit pitching of Ray Benge. It was the eighth consecutive game the Dodgers have beaten the Pirates this season.

Frederick's double and Leslie's single accounted for the first Dodger run, and Lopez worked his way around to score in the sixth on a bunt and singles by Frederick and Taylor. A triple by Tony Lavagetto drove in Pittsburgh's run. Score:

Davis Finally Gives Up.

Curt Davis finally bogged down in the eighth after some more inept infielding in his so-called supporting cast. Jurges led off with the third Chicago hit, a swell double to left center, and moved to third on Lee's sacrifice. With the infield pulled in Hack bounced one straight at Chiozza on which Jurges wisely lingered near third until he saw the ball go between Chiozza's heels. Then, of course, he scored on the error. Billy Herman followed with a single to left. Klein popped to Walters but Babe Herman walked, filling the bases, and Cuyler walked, forcing in Hack. O'Farrell forced out Cuyler.

SECOND GAME

Scoring in the second game started after two were out in the Cub half of the second inning. With one down Cuyler singled to right. Hartnett sent a long fly to George Davis. Then Hurst drove the ball cross-wind for a homer well into the right field bleachers, scoring behind Cuyler. Jurges beat out a bouncer to Camilli and went to third when Bush dropped a Texas league single in front of G. Davis. Chiozza fell on his back as he was about to grab Hack's grounder and it went for a single as the ball bounced over Chiozza into center field, Jurges scoring and Bush reaching third. Billy Herman forced Hack.

Walters led off the sixth with a double over third, the second hit off Bush, and took third on Euel Moore's infield out, whence he scored on Bartell's first hit of the series, a single to center. Chiozza doubled to right, Bartell stopping at third. Allen grounded to Jurges and Bartell was out at the plate, Jurges to Hartnett. Johnny Moore bounced out to Hurst.

Klein Gits a Hit.

Klein got his first hit of the afternoon when he singled with two out in the seventh and scored on Babe Herman's double. The Babe, however, was out when he ran past second and was trapped, Allen to Bartell to Walters. Klein aggravated his sore leg and was replaced by Stainback when the Cubs took the field.

White Sox Beat Senators, 9-8, in 9th Inning

games. Appling's single to right scored Swanson and put the hustling Simmons on third. Dykes walked, filling the bases, but Hayes popped out and Hopkins grounded into a force out, completing a rocky inning for the bewhiskered fellow.

Benson, however, was treated mildly in comparison to what the Senators did to Gaston in their half. They scored three runs. Bluege walked and Schulte and Myer singled to center, the latter's drive sending Bluege home. A pass to Cronin filled the bases. Schulte scored as Appling started a double play on Bolton, and Myer scored when Hopkins fumbled Stone's roller.

The Sox got back one run in the third. Appling walked after two were out and went to third when Harris loafed on Dykes' single. Hayes' single to center scored Appling, but Hopkins popped out.

Two More for Sox.

They went back into the lead with two more in the fourth. Shea and Swanson walked. Both runners moved up when Haas grounded to Susko. Simmons whizzed a single past Benson's whiskers, scoring both runners.

A bit of chicanery by Rookie Susko led to the Senators tying up the contest in the fourth. Harris walked with one out and stole second when Susko, at bat, deliberately interfered with Shea's throw. Umpire Ormsby, however, paid no heed to the Sox's protests. Susko then singled to score Harris.

Gaston was touched for three hits in the sixth, on which the Senators snatched back the lead. Bolton singled out of Hayes' reach and advanced on an infield out. Harris singled to center, scoring Bolton. Susko followed with a single and Benson advanced both runners with a sacrifice. Hayes then threw out Stone.

It Appeared Bad.

Washington kept up the assault on Gaston in the seventh with a two run drive. Myer and Cronin singled after Schulte popped out and both scored when Bolton smashed a double to left. Gaston walked Harris and Susko, then captured Benson's line drive.

METAL MIRROR HAILED AS AID TO TELEVISION

New York Radio Engineer Perfects Device.

New York, Aug. 19.—(AP)—A tiny metal mirror, mounted on a slender rod and vibrated at scanning speeds was presented today by William H. Priess, New York radio engineer, as what he considers the solution of television's major problems.

With this device and its light source, Priess says, he will be able to reproduce television images on a screen two and one-half feet square approximately equal to the quality of home moving pictures. He has been working on the apparatus since 1930 and by fall expects to be ready to conduct tests outside the laboratory under actual working conditions.

Priess describes his method as a resonant scanner. Actually it is electro-mechanical, because the mirror, which is only a quarter of an inch square, is vibrated by his speed relays similar to the telegraph relay. The relays, which obtain power from a local source, are controled by the incoming picture signal to give absolutely automatic synchronization.

Mounted on Wire.

The mirror is mounted on a steel music wire eight one-hundredths of an inch in diameter and three inches long. One end of this wire is rigidly suspended in a frame containing the magnetic coils of the relays. The relays make it vibrate in two directions, giving the effect of a back and forth and an up and down scanning motion.

Unlike the Ninkow disc, with its clumsy mechanical scanning, it is compact, has no motor and only a comparatively small amount of motion. Priess also pointed out its advantages over the cathode ray system of scanning, which is entirely electrical, explaining that no intricate wave forms were required for its operation.

The light for the image is obtained from a bank of small incandescent lamps with upright filaments and a Kerr cell, a device developed in the eighties by the British scientist of that name for the modulation of light.

Six Lamps Mounted.

Six of these lamps are mounted to reflect their combined rays upon a condensing lens which narrows the beam to a small spot. This spot is passed through the Kerr cell. This, connected to the output of a television receiver, causes the beam to be modulated by the incoming picture signal. From the Kerr cell the light beam is sent to the tiny vibrating mirror, which in turn scans and reflects it to a screen consisting of a frosted glass mirror.

In transmitting, a reverse process is followed, with light from an image being reflected by the tiny scanning mirror to a photo electric cell and then fed into a radio transmitter.

Priess says that the number of lines he can obtain will be limited only by the width of the wave band to be used. He expects to be able to go up to 300 a picture, which is equivalent to 90,000 dots. These pictures are sent at the rate of 24 per second to give flickerless motion.

Priess Radio Pioneer.

Priess is one of radio's pioneers and has been associated with all forms of air communication since before the days of the world war. While of recent years he has been devoting his time to television and the work of a consulting engineer, he is best remembered for his development of the reflex broadcast receiver and the untuned amplifier for multi-tube reception.

LEON H. LOEHR, FORMER BANKER, DIES IN HINSDALE

Death Follows Heart Attack Thursday.

Leon L. Loehr, former vice president and head of the trust department of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, died last night in his home at 415 South Park avenue, Hinsdale. Mr. Loehr was 69 years old. He was taken suddenly ill Thursday with a heart attack.

LEON L. LOEHR.

Mr. Loehr retired from the bank Jan. 1, 1931, and left on a world tour with his wife, the former Harlett Fayette. Since then he has traveled extensively, and at the time of his death was engaged in some special work for the bank in connection with the Lambert Tree estate.

Native of Illinois.

He was born at Bloomington, Nov. 16, 1866, and was educated in the public schools there, later graduating from the Illinois Wesleyan university. In 1893 he completed his course at the Kent College of Law, and was immediately admitted to the bar.

For a few years he was associated with the Illinois Bell Telephone company, until he and the late M. Byron Rich formed a law partnership, which was not dissolved until 1900 when Mr. Loehr became associated with the old Merchants Loan and Trust company as head of their trust department.

Long Banking Service.

He remained there until the consolidation with the Illinois Trust and Savings bank as the Illinois Merchants Trust company. When the latter organization was absorbed by the Continental National bank Mr. Loehr, who had been eligible for retirement for several years, announced he would remain only until the new trust department was organized.

Mr. Loehr was a director of several companies, and treasurer of the Crippled Children's home, operated by the Masonic order here, of which he was a member. He also belonged to the Hinsdale Country club.

He is survived by his widow, two sisters, Mrs. George L. Knapp of Washington, and Mrs. Laban A. Arnold of Oakland, Cal., and a brother, Karl Loehr of River Forest. Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home.

DR. EMMA DAFTER DIES AT 68 YEARS; SERVICES TODAY

Dr. Emma Tyler Dafter, 68 years old, well known osteopathic physician of Evanston, died yesterday at the Evanston hospital after a brief illness. Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock in St. Luke's Episcopal church, Evanston, with Bishop George Craig Stewart officiating. The body will be taken for burial to Marinette, Wis., tomorrow, where a second service will be held in St. Paul's Episcopal church there.

Dr. Dafter was a charter member of the American Whist league, and at their recent tournament here, won the all-around whist and contract trophy with Mrs. R. W. Parsons of New York city.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Nuel D. Belnap of Winnetka; a brother, William Tyler of Newton, Ia., and a sister, Mrs. Myra T. Wallace of St. Paul, Minn. Dr. Dafter lived at the Evanston hotel for many years. She was born in Manitowoc, Wis.

MRS. FALK FETES FIRST STUDENT TO WIN SCHOLARSHIP

The first student to be awarded the Falk memorial scholarship to Brown University was entertained at dinner yesterday by the donors of the scholarship, Mrs. Max L. Falk, 1242 Lake Shore drive, and her daughter, Amy. He is Charles Summerfield, 20 years old, of Rockford, who was selected by the Brown university committee on awards from among 300 applicants. The scholarship is a perpetual one and was established by Mrs. Falk several months ago in memory of her husband, the late Lester L. Falk of Chicago, member of the law firm of Scott, MacLeish & Falk, a graduate of Brown university in the class of 1906.

MRS. EARL L. SEAL DIES AT 45 YEARS; RITES TOMORROW

Mrs. Grace Dunbar Seal, 45 years old, wife of Earl Lindbergh Seal, a cousin of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, died in the Evangelical hospital yesterday. Mrs. Seal, a native of South Dakota, lived at 6330 Blackstone avenue. She is survived by her husband, a daughter, Margaret, 12 years old, and a son, Earl, 16 years old. Funeral services will be held at the funeral chapel, 7350 Cottage Grove avenue, at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Oak Hill cemetery.

JAMES B. BOWLER'S MOTHER-IN-LAW DIES AT 71 YEARS

Mrs. Catherine Sweeney, 71 years old, mother-in-law of James B. Bowler, Chicago public vehicle commissioner and former alderman of the 25th ward, died yesterday at the Bowler summer cottage near McHenry. She had suffered a stroke of paralysis Saturday. Mrs. Sweeney is survived only by her daughter, Mrs. Bowler. Funeral services will be held from the Bowler residence at 1311 South California avenue to St. Agatha's church at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday.

Widow of Robert Lansing, Ex-Cabinet Member, Dies

Watertown, N. Y., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Mrs. Eleanor Foster Lansing, 68, widow of Robert Lansing, secretary of state under President Wilson, died at her Henderson Harbor summer home last night of heart disease.

Mrs. Lansing had expressed hope she would die at the summer home in which she had entertained many world notables in the last forty years.

She was born May 13, 1866, at Evansville, Ind., and studied at Mount Vernon seminary and Smith college. She traveled extensively. She married Robert Lansing Jan. 15, 1890. In 1915 he succeeded William J. Bryan as President Wilson's secretary of state. He served until 1920.

Mrs. Lansing was long prominent in social and diplomatic circles of Washington. In 1919 she attended the world peace conference with her husband. He died Oct. 30, 1928.

Relatives surviving are a sister, Mrs. Edith Foster Dulles, New York City, and two nephews and three nieces.

Mrs. Sarah J. Cole Dies in Home Here at 99

Mrs. Sarah J. Cole, 99 years old, died yesterday at the home of her nephew, E. J. Hubbard of 3206 Wisconsin avenue, Berwyn, where she had made her home for the last twelve years. Mrs. Cole was born in Oswego county, N. Y., June 14, 1835, and resided there until coming to Berwyn. She had been in good health until four weeks ago, when she fell and broke one of her hips. Her death was attributed to the injury. The funeral will be held from the residence tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Planes Tangle in Mid-Air; Pilot Fatally Injured

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Soon as Al Jolson had made his appearance at the Chicagoland Music Festival Saturday night he hurried to the airport and caught a west bound plane scheduled to land him in Hollywood with his wife. The reason for haste: It was Ruby's birthday Sunday. Al will be out of radio for at least several months while he makes "Casino De Paree." Paul Whiteman's Music Hall on which Jolson has been appearing, Al stated, will probably go off the air late this fall. Then Whiteman, Jolson, and Ruby Keeler plan to make a personal appearance tour. "Just to help the government raise some tax money," Al vouchsafed.

Lawrence Tibbett will be back on the air at 7:30 Tuesday, Sept. 18 over NBC for the motor car concern that had Walter Damrosch's symphony on the air last season. It's reported he will get $4,000 a week. The plan is to use an orchestra of symphonic proportions with the baritone.

Ray Noble, popular British orchestra leader, is to be brought to America to play at Radio City Roof garden [65 stories up and $20 a plate] if union angles can be satisfactorily ironed out. He's also slated for an NBC commercial program.

Jack Benny, Mary Livingstone, Frank Parker, and Don Bestor will switch from their tire sponsor to jello selling around the first of October, but they'll be back with the present sponsor early next year. Benny will be busy this season, since he also will be playing the lead in a Broadway play, "Bring On the Girls."

A series of guest artists, yet to be chosen, will be presented by Floyd Gibbons as master of ceremonies on Phil Baker's Friday night show over NBC while Phil vacations for six weeks beginning Aug. 31. Irene Beasley and Roy Shield's orchestra will continue to furnish the musical end of the show while Baker, Bottle, and Beetle take their ease.

Gloria LaVey replaces Gladys Swarthout tomorrow night on the Beauty Box Theater in "Pinafore," while the noted mezzo-soprano takes a brief rest. Edward Neil Jr., recently heard here on the Silken Strings show will play opposite her.

Morton Downey is putting in a busy week. He's headlining at the Chicago theater, doubling at the Chez Paree, and doing a radio audition or two as well. . . . Danny Russo returns to the air over WBBM-CBS from the Canton Tea gardens tonight. . . . Joey Nash, soloist with Richard Himber's Champions, heard on both networks, is featured in a new Warner Brothers' picture, "Melody Masters."

GOSPEL BY RADIO DIVIDES INTEREST WITH POLE SITTER

The songs and sermon from the Third Presbyterian church at Ashland boulevard and Ogden avenue continued to blare forth into the street through a loudspeaker last night without interference from the police. There had been police warnings recently that residents in the neighborhood were complaining of the noise. As a result the Rev A. H. Leaman, director of the church's "Century of Progress evangelistic campaign," decreased the loudspeaker's volume last night.

Vying for the interest of passersby who paused to listen to the church services was a professional flagpole sitter, who is perched on a pole atop the Flatiron building across the street at 1553 West Madison street. Powers began his sitting vigil Saturday afternoon.

2 Children Die in Blazing Home; Parents at Movies

Golden's Bridge, N. Y., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—Two children, trapped in their third floor bedroom, were killed in a fire which swept through their home early today. Two attempts were made to save them. Edgar Archer, 30, failed to find them in the smoke and was forced to leap from a third floor window. He is in a critical condition. Harold Quinn, volunteer fireman, found the children, Elmer Koulter, 7, and his sister Bernice, 5, clasped in each others arms, dead. An hour after the fire had been extinguished, the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Koulter, returned home from the movies.

Ex-Spanish Envoy's Son Is Acquitted of Killing Girl

MADRID, Aug. 19.—Merry Del Val, son of the former Spanish ambassador to London, was acquitted today by a court hearing charges against him in connection with the fatal shooting of a girl on a Madrid street and the wounding of her two brothers. Fascist friends of Del Val shook hands with him after the verdict and cheered while he rode home with his family in the same automobile from which, according to the prosecuting attorney, the shots were fired.

NIGEL PLAYFAIR, NOTED ACTOR, IS DEAD IN LONDON

LONDON, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Sir Nigel Playfair, noted actor and theatrical manager, died today after an abdominal operation. He was 60 years old.

Starting in business life as a barrister, Sir Nigel Playfair first appeared on the stage at London's Garrick theater in "A Pair of Knickerbockers" in 1902. There followed a long acting career which brought him a host of prominent parts in popular British productions. He was made a knight in 1928.

In 1918 he assumed the management of the Lyric theater in Hammersmith, London, producing in the following year John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," which ran for a year. Turning playwright in later years, he wrote "Shock-Headed Peter" and "Amelia," in addition to collaborating in the authorship of other plays. During 1932 he appeared in a film, "Perfect Understanding."

He was a frequent contributor to London periodicals.

WAVE AND AN OAR CAUSE DROWNINGS IN NORTH LAKES

Lawrence D. Buck, 48 years old, a plasterer, of 6217 Ingleside avenue, was drowned yesterday in Loon lake a mile south of Antioch, Lake county, when he jumped into the lake to recover an oar lost from a boat in which he, his wife, Frances, and Miss Emma Circow, 3078 Lock street, were rowing. Apparently Buck was seized with cramps. Efforts of his wife to rescue him failed.

John Pearson, 53 years old, 7124 Englewood avenue, was drowned in Lake Geneva, across the Wisconsin line, yesterday. He was hurled into the water when high waves caused him to lose his balance as he was changing seats in a small boat with a companion, Gus Carlson, 6031 South Green street.

Walter H. Kellog, Known as "Teasel King," Is Dead

GRAINS EASE AS MENTAL FOG GRIPS TRADERS

U. S. Threats Cloud Outlook.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The trend of the grain market last week was a fair reflection of the mental state of the traders. The shadow of further potential government regulation of commodity speculation was over the market and crop shortages, weather conditions and the healthy demand for cash grains occupied subordinate positions as market factors.

With the exception of barley, which staged a rise all its own, the entire grain market declined last week. Saturday's closing prices on futures of leading grains were moderately under the preceding week's final prices. It was the nervous and erratic fluctuations from day to day, reflecting the agitation in the average speculator's mind, that gave the real clue to the market rather than the actual net changes shown for the week.

Opinions Are Mixed.

Just how serious is the threat of further government interference with the commodity markets is a matter of dispute. A minority found in the President's warning to food profiteers nothing to be alarmed about. All agreed in the long run that what will govern the course of grain prices is the actual supply available and the demand for it.

As to the temporary trend there was a wide difference of opinon. Speculation has been at low ebb for several months considering the crop outlook upon which future prices are based. Certainly the President's statement was not calculated to encourage speculation and it cannot be denied that for the time being at least it has made traders jittery.

The erratic trend of the market cannot be attributed entirely to the President's statement and that of Secretary Wallace, but neither would give much hope to a commodity speculator who thinks he is always an easy target in any campaign against food profiteering.

Other Trends Confusing.

Other conditions helped make the price trend confusing. The market had experienced a long upturn which carried the price of September wheat up about 22 cents a bushel to a high price of $1.11. A reaction could not be considered abnormal. Speculative buying of varying degrees of strength had entered the market. There was a natural inclination to take profits. That the bullish government crop report had been fairly well exploited before its actual release was quite apparent last week.

The market declined immediately following the report's release to the full price limits allowed. That ground has not been recovered and although the plan to abandon acreage curtailment may have played a part in the price reaction as well as the threat against food profiteering they cannot account entirely for the decline.

Aggressive Speculation Lacking.

The lack of aggressive speculation based on a long term viewpoint may be the reason. More likely is the fact that the public and speculators generally have become so accustomed to hearing about short crops that it no longer makes any impression.

WHEAT.

	High.	Low.	Aug. 18.	Close Aug. 11.
Sept.	1.05⅛	1.00⅛	1.03⅜	1.04
Dec.	1.08⅛	1.02¾	1.04⅝	1.07
May	1.11⅛	1.04⅛	1.06⅝	1.10

Season's range, September, $1.11@74½; December, $1.13¼@84½; May, $1.17@1.01.

CORN.

	High.	Low.	Aug. 18.	Close Aug. 11.
Sept.	77⅛	73¼	74⅛	76
Dec.	80⅝	75¼	76⅝	79⅛
May	85⅛	78¼	79⅛	83⅝

Season's range, September, 80¾@45c; December, 84@58⅜c; May, 88⅝@77¼c.

OATS.

	High.	Low.	Aug. 18.	Close Aug. 11.
Sept.	50⅜	48⅛	49⅛	50⅛
Dec.	52⅜	49½	50⅜	51⅜
May	55⅛	50⅝	51⅝	54⅜

Season's range, September, 55⅛@29½c; December, 56⅝@41⅞c; May, 59¼@50¼c.

When fundamental conditions which brought prices to the present levels will reassert themselves is not easy to predict.

OVER HALF OF HOMES IN COUNTRY SUPPORT BURDEN OF MORTGAGE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—Considerably more than half the so-called home owners of this country are struggling under the burden of a mortgage on their property, figures issued by the commerce department indicated today. Canvassing sixty-three cities, the department found that only 46 per cent of the owner occupied dwellings were completely unincumbered and owned outright by their occupant. The remaining 54 per cent, it was disclosed, are mortgaged.

Out of a total of 2,313,955 dwellings covered by the department's survey, only 913,487, or 39.4 per cent, were owned by their occupant. Of this number 354,389 were found to be free of debt incumbrances and 415,283 were mortgaged. The department received no report on the tenure of 143,815 homes, it was stated.

Dividing the country into geographical sections, the department reported that the west-north central area has the largest number of owner occupied homes. In the cities within this division, it was said, there are 177,120 dwellings owned by the occupant, of which 75,255 are free of debt and 78,305 are mortgaged. Following closely was the Pacific states area.

In the east-north central area, which includes Illinois, the department discovered 243,887 dwellings. But only 102,004 were occupied by the owner himself. Owned free in this section were 36,036 homes, while 54,499 dwellings were mortgaged.

National Bank Assets Rise 960 Millions

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—Total assets of the 5,422 national banks operating on an unrestricted basis in the United States, Alaska, and Hawaii as of June 30 amounted to $24,901,592,000, an increase of $960,419,000 over the total reported by 5,293 banks on March 5, it was announced today by Controler of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor.

This is also a gain of $3,041,101,006 over that reported by 4,902 banks on June 30 of last year. Loans and discounts on June 30 totaled $7,694,749,000, against $7,899,,279,000 on March 5 and $8,116,972,000 on June 30, 1933.

Investments in government securities, excluding those guaranteed by the government as to interest and principal, aggregated $5,654,741,000, an increase of $238,393,000 since March and $1,614,165,000 since a year ago.

Liabilities 357 Millions.

Contingent liabilities of the United States government in the form of guaranties as to interest and principal on obligations of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, Federal Farm Mortgage corporation, and Home Owners' Loan corporation held by the banks amounted to $357,911,000.

Other securities held by the banks aggregated $3,344,901,000, a gain of $58,037,000 since March 5 and $4,846,000 since a year ago. Balances due from banks, including reserve with the federal reserve banks of $2,497,400,000, totaled $5,295,641,000, against $4,528,681,000 and $3,793,460,000.

Cash in vaults at $352,402,000 showed a decline of $5,900,000 from March but an increase of $63,924,000 over a year ago. The book value of capital stock amounted to $1,737,827,000 and represented a par value of $1,738,792,000, of which $401,989,000 was in class A preferred stock, $10,081,000 in class B preferred, and $1,326,722,000 in common stock.

Book Value Higher.

Book value showed increases of $83,897,000 and $222,180,000, respectively, over March and a year ago. Increased in par value were $83,804,000 and $221,587,000. Surplus funds of $854,057,000 and net undivided profits of $257,295,000, a total of $1,111,352,000, showed a decrease of $5,343,000 since March and $64,846,000 since June, 1933. This total is before reserves for contingencies, preferred stock retirement funds, and dividends payable in common stock of $151,854,000.

Notes in circulation totaled $698,293,000, against $790,037,000 and $730,,35,000. Total deposits at $19,932,660,000 showed an increase of $1,142,173,000, or 6.8 per cent, since March and $3,158,545,000, or 18.83 per cent, since June 30, 1933. This total included amounts due to banks and certified and cashiers' checks outstanding of $2,870,925,000, government deposits of $889,678,000, demand deposits of $9,280,920,000, and time deposits of $6,891,128,000.

Postal savings of $440,782,000 were included in the time deposit total, a decrease of $110,310,000 since March. Bills payable of $13,672,000 and rediscounts of $2,007,000, totaling $15,679,000, showed declines of $37,040,000 and $102,176,000, respectively, from March and a year ago.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—(AP)—Bank examiners have been ordered not to classify paper discounted by banks under the national housing act as slow, doubtful, or loss until it has been determined the loss exceeds 20 per cent of the government guarantee on modernization loans. This order has been given by Controler O'Connor, it was revealed today by Albert L. Deane, deputy housing administrator.

A letter from Mr. O'Connor to Administrator Moffett dated Aug. 1 led some bankers to fear that bank examiners would be allowed to use their own discretion in this matter, Mr. Deane said, and to consequent confusion and slowing up of the modernization campaign.

The housing administration made it clear also that the Federal Housing administration will reimburse banks for 20 per cent of their total losses on modernization loans.

STEEL OUTLOOK DIMS; OUTPUT IS DOWN 6 POINTS

Production Falls to 21.5 Per Cent.

Looking to the future steelmakers can see only prospects for additional government work and some revival in automobile requirements, according to the magazine Steel, which reports that operations last week receded 6 points to 21½ per cent of potential capacity.

A pronounced depressing influence in the market was caused by the lack of new demands since consumers stocked up with steel seven weeks ago, because of widespread labor difficulties and uncertainties regarding governmental policies.

"To find a counterpart of the doubt that prevails among steel sellers," the magazine says, "it is necessary to go back to the beginning of the administration's recovery program. A year of the steel code, the anniversary of which fell on Sunday, finds steel wages, prices and employment enhanced 8 to 10 per cent and iron and steel production down 55 to 57 per cent."

Auto Decline Resisted.

The recession in automobile output is meeting unusual resistance. Production last week amounted to 54,000 cars which is only 20 per cent below the week of July 14. Structural shape mills are operating at a relatively high rate, principally on government awards. A survey of 40 architects and engineers in a leading industrial district last week showed prospective tonnage is less than 2,000 tons.

A local political dispute in the Pittsburgh area threatens to cause the government to withdraw a loan for bridges that would require 50,000 tons of steel, the review says. Structural steel awards during the week totaled 13,000, against 23,882 tons the preceding week.

Rail mills are completing the last of the orders placed in the year under government sponsorship. The Baltimore & Ohio has opened several car and locomotive repair shops to complete its PWA repair program. Illinois Central is to award 11 Diesel locomotives during this month.

Award Pipe Order.

Among specific orders is an award of 2,000 tons of steel pipe for Standard Oil of California, and there are prospects of early placing of 14,000 additional tons for a 108 mile line. The department of agriculture has purchased 749 tons of telephone wire.

The drop in operations resulted from declines of 4 points to 15 per cent at Pittsburgh, 4 to 28 at Chicago, 4 to 26 at Wheeling, 9 to 13 at Cleveland, 9½ to 23½ at Buffalo, 2½ to 20½ in eastern Pennsylvania, 9 to 29 in New England and 16 to 22 at Youngstown. There was an advance of 5 points to 25 per cent at Birmingham while Detroit held steady at 77 per cent.

Steel's price composites are unchanged with the iron and steel index at $32.23, finished steel at $54 and steelworks scrap at $9.96 a ton.

JEWEL TEA CO. TAX BILL EQUALS $1.23 PER SHARE

Federal and state taxes paid by the Jewel Tea company in the first half of 1934 equaled $1.23 a share on the company's stock, it was disclosed in the interim report covering operations for the 28 weeks ended July 14. Consolidated net earnings, after charges and provisions for taxes, totaled $702,641 compared with $305,637 in the same period last year. Improvement of 21.65 per cent in sales was stated to be almost entirely due to serving more customers, rather than prices, which were only slightly higher than a year ago.

SECURITY LISTING FOR 7 MONTHS IS $451,348,675

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—Deducting all withdrawals and stop orders, a total of 227 security registrations filed with the federal trade commission and involving $451,348,675, became effective during the first seven months of 1934. Common stock issues accounted for $226,719,896, or 59.1 per cent of the total.

During July, registrations of all kinds which became effective included forty-two statements of securities having a total value of $113,081,101. Excluding certificates of deposits and reorganization securities, there were twenty-two registration statements covering securities with a value of $101,536,827. This was almost twice the June total, when twenty-seven registrations of this character, for $54,982,798, became effective.

Practically nine-tenths of the total effective securities in July were reported to be sold for cash and selling expenses. The costs of selling, distribution, etc., $6,829,822, was only about 7 per cent of the total securities to be sold for cash and selling expenses, as compared with nearly 11 per cent for the first six months of the year.

Roads Have 20,185 Surplus Stock Cars Awaiting Use

Notwithstanding the increased shipment of cattle from the drouth stricken sections of the west, class 1 railroads had 20,185 surplus stock cars on hand on July 14, it was reported to the American Railway association. Surplus refrigerator cars on that date numbered 9,120, a decrease of 310 compared with June 30.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 19.—Henry Brady, sheriff's auctioneer, will sell tomorrow eleven promissory notes of various utility holding and operating companies in eastern areas formerly controled by the Insull interests. The sale was ordered by Daniel E. Finn, sherif of New York county.

The sale of these notes, the terms of which are cash down, is part of the process for the liquidation of intercompany indebtedness of Ohio companies in the former Insull group and affect properties now owned by a subsidiary of the Manufacturers Trust company in consequence of a settlement between creditors effected some months ago.

London Gets Excited Over Crop Failure

Foreign markets have become increasingly interested in the action of American grain markets and the outlook for American crops as the result of the drouth. Not for many years, in fact since the federal farm board piled up such huge surpluses that the United States was forced from the world export picture, has England shown other than apathetic interest.

Recently the London Express deemed the situation so important that it considered a trans-Atlantic telephone toll small cost to obtain the views of the world's leading grain exchange. The paper's representative talked with Peter B. Carey, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, for more than 20 minutes. And that call cost about $220.

A market operator's attempt to get away from the frenzied anxiety of the present New Deal financial scene has ended in failure. He elected to read translations of the classics, comparing his act to the frantic flight of Oedipus from his mother. He plowed along through the life of Augustus Caesar, but quit when confronted with the following passage concerning "old deal" economics:

"I was much inclined to abolish forever the practice of allowing the people corn at public expense, because they trust so much to it they are too lazy to till their lands; but I did not persevere in my design as I felt sure the practice would some time or other be revived by some one ambitious of popular favor."

Jerry, a farm boy who makes his living by delivering eggs in the city, located a family on the relief rolls that was getting more canned goods than it could use. Being short of ready cash, the family offered an even exchange of canned goods for eggs. "Now," said Jerry, "when we want peaches, we open any can but one labeled peaches, and hope we hit on what we want. The labels on a lot of the relief stuff must have been mixed."

WALL ST. SCANS TRADE HORIZON FOR STOCK CUES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 19.—With speculative and investment activity ebbing down to the low water mark, the stock market slumped into an all but motionless attitude last week, once more reflecting Wall street's feeling that it cannot see with clearness very far ahead.

At the moment the financial community is training its sights on four separate quarters of the horizon—the course of industry, conditions in the grain belt as affected by the drouth, the federal government's plans, and the troubled European picture. Considering that all four are surrounded with obscurity, coupled with the gloom prevading the market's own house, it is worthy of note that prices of stocks on the whole should have indulged in recovery in a small degree.

Trade at Low Point.

The saying goes that difference of opinion makes horse races and stock markets, and, arguing from that premise, observers reach the conclusion that there is little difference of opinion in the street anent financial and business affairs. The market's declining cycle of activity touched bottom on Saturday when only 164,000 shares changed hands in the shortened session. For the week only 3,165,960 shares were traded, compared with 8,494,320 a year ago, and more than 13,000,000 two years ago.

It is said that only a little lift in the form of good news would be sufficient to turn prices upward. That lift, however, was not forthcoming. For a time it appeared as though a Horse-car days . . . neckties were broad and flowing . . . derbies narrow brimmed, high crowned . . . Those were the younger days of The Northern Trust Company.

BY A BANKING OFFICER'S DESK

45 years ago . . . and now

By the roll-topped desks of each of its officers, then, stood a welcoming chair for customers. Man to man with their banker, people were invited to discuss their affairs of estate and finance.

Today other desks have replaced those with the high and rolling tops. But the customer with a financial decision to make is welcome still to sit down by an officer's desk at The Northern Trust Company. His bank is always ready to act in his behalf with a full knowledge of his current problem.

The Northern Trust Company is still able to deal with its customers as individuals. In day to day contacts here that means time-economy and convenience. When you are deciding matters important to your family or your business, it means there are men of experience available to counsel directly with you.

Four complete departments are here to serve you. Banking for personal or commercial checking accounts, Trust, Savings, Bond (U. S. Gov't and high grade state and municipal issues). The facilities of The Northern Trust Safe Deposit Company are also at your service.

ADVISE BUSINESS LEADERS TO GIVE BETTER REPORTS

Executives Assert Public Is Entitled to Facts.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—(AP)—So investors may know better where their money is going, American business men were advised today by three of their most important executives to supply more detailed, uniform and intelligible information to the public.

The advice was offered by Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company; Pierre S. du Pont, chairman of E. I. do Pont de Nemours & Co., and William A. Harriman, railroad executive and NRA adviser.

The recommendations were contained in an elaborate report to the business advisory and planning council of the department of commerce. They specifically asserted that "the investor is entitled to believe that the general impression conveyed by the [corporation] statements was intended to be conveyed and that it is the right impression."

Of Public Concern.

They added:

"In a country in which the ownership of corporations is distributed among millions of stockholders, and savings of additional millions are invested in the bonds of such corporations, directly or through savings banks, insurance companies and other fiduciary institutions, the amount of reliance placed upon corporate financial statements is very great; they are matters of considerable public concern.

"Indeed, it appears that these public financial reports, since they are most readily available to the general public, are the key to the solution of the basic problem of protecting the small investor."

The three business men, however, assailed the theory of uniform accounting, holding that all companies could not report the same information in the same way.

Consistency Is Urged.

Approved, none the less, was the theory of obtaining more consistent use of the same principles of accounting within the same corporation and industry over a period of years.

The report also condemned, generally speaking, the policy of writing assets up or down, and recommended that fixed assets [generally not for sale] should be valued on a cost basis and that current assets [usually for sale] be valued at cost or market whichever is the lower.

To attain the objective of intelligibility, the researchers recommended a statement of accounting principles so that investors might know how the figures were calculated. They suggested, too, that the simple statement should be accompanied by detail sheets for expert analysts who make interpretations for the public.

Despite all these suggestions, the report warned that no accounting principles could ever be a substitute for judgment and experience by the investor, but added: "Progressive steps can and should be taken at this time."

Sugar Melt Total Runs Below Record of 1933

New York, Aug. 19.—The sugar melt of 13 United States refiners from Jan. 1 to Aug. 11 totaled 2,185,000 long tons, compared with 2,470,000 in the same period a year ago. Deliveries during the period amounted to 2,050,000 long tons, against 2,230,000 a year ago.

Letters of not more than 200 words, addressed to the Financial Editor will be printed in this column from time to time.

Foreign Debts.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Aug. 4.—I have read your newspaper since 1906, and wish to call to your attention the following:

Some foreign debtors are trying to pay through their fiscal agents in the United States interest coupons on their bonds, which they placed in the United States a while ago, at a song. These foreign debtors are offering as low as 20 per cent of the face amount of the coupons, which became due April 1, 1934, and July 1, 1934, but they have not paid the interest on their bonds since 1932, and want now to pay only a part of the interest, to be within the new law of the United States.

I don't know by what right they lower the interest rates on their bonds. All these foreign bonds contain the so-called "gold clause," which means that the capital as well as interest are payable in U. S. gold coin. They now want to pay American investors only in paper dollars, whereas they should pay us today about $169 in U. S. currency for every $100 of gold clause obligation or for interest due on them.

The exchange rate of nearly all foreign currency rose to the same extent as the U. S. dollar dropped. In 1932 the German mark was about $23.85 per hundred, and now the rate is about $38 per hundred, therefore, at the time the Germans made the loans they received about 416 reichsmarks for $100. Now 169 paper dollars would cost them also only about 416 marks, so why should these foreign debtors not live up to their contracts, and why shall we American investors accept, first, a lower interest rate and, secondly, why shall we accept paper dollars when the bonds and interest coupons contain the "gold clause"?

Why does our federal government not protect its citizens, permitting such securities to be placed on the market in the United States? Why should the American investor lose his hard earned money in order that foreign debtors may enrich themselves? J. V. ZINNER.

We Take a Bow.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 15.—I had occasion a short time ago to make inquiries through your valuable paper, the replies to which aided me greatly. THE TRIBUNE for many years has been a constant companion; Sunday's splendid issue being at my elbow while I write. I have always found the daily financial and general business news, together with national and international events, in the front rank.

U. S. LIENS LEAD VIGOROUS RALLY IN BOND PRICES

Firm Tone Marks All Sections of List.

New York, Aug. 19.—(AP)—Bonds staged a vigorous recovery last week under the leadership of United States government obligations.

Except for Monday, when prime investment issues were a little shaky, a firm tone marked the course of trading and prices in every section of the list improved substantially. Low priced rails and utilities along with treasury issues, made especially good gains.

Inflation Talk Overdone.

The week's trading began under the influence of inflation sentiment and the effects of the preceding week's sharp break in government security prices. The belief gained favor that this attitude was somewhat overdone as the week progressed, however, and inflation fears were mostly put to rout by the shipment of gold to Paris in response to the high level of foreign exchanges.

This was regarded as an indication of a relatively orthodox treasury policy in respect to the gold position of the dollar, and acted as an offset to whatever unfavorable investment impression created by the nationalization of silver.

Federal List Recovers.

United States government issues recovered a large part of their recent losses. Sizable gains were registered every day, and the firm trend attracted investment buying into corporate loans.

The market was particularly buoyant on Tuesday and Wednesday when buying assumed relatively large proportions. The volume of trading dwindled with each session, however, and by the end of the week had receded to the modest levels prevailing before recent weakness in high grade issues stimulated business.

In the foreign list, South American, particularly Argentine issues attracted more attention than European obligations. French bonds advanced, however, approaching their peak levels.

CURB FLUCTUATES NARROWLY; PRICE CHANGES SMALL

New York, Aug. 19.—(AP)—The curb market was quiet last week. Changes were generally nominal except in a few specialties. The trend was moderately higher at the start but scattered selling later canceled most of the improvement.

Metals, firm in the previous week, met active selling Tuesday. Oils were again narrow throughout, while alcohols and utilities turned slightly lower. Swift International and Swift & Co. moved up actively, the former recording successive new highs for the year. Pepperell Manufacturing, Childs company preferred, and Singer Manufacturing experienced sharp run-ups in light odd lot dealings. Aluminum Company of America was firm.

Lake Shore and Bunker Hill and Sullivan sold lower. Shares which largely erased moderately early improvement included Electric Bond and Share, Hiram Walker, Glen Alden Coal, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Fisk Rubber, American Gas and Electric, and Pioneer Gold. Transfers for each full session, which averaged around 125,000 shares, were a bit under the previous week.

Believe Effects of Drouth Overemphasized.

New York, Aug. 19.—(AP)—As the vacation season draws toward its close, industrial trends continue to bump along the bottom of the summer slump but a healthy volume of retail trade is accepted as auguring well for an autumn revival of general business.

Business analysts, while disinclined to minimize the drouth, are now estimating aggregate farm income substantially above last year, and warn that business confidence has undoubtedly been unduly disturbed by the widespread crop damage. Lower temperatures and considerable rainfall have had a distinctly beneficial effect upon sentiments.

Dun & Bradstreet's weekly survey found retail trade for the country at large still running ahead of last year, save in some of the drouth areas. Best reports came from the southwest and the Pacific coast, with gains as high as 20 to 30 per cent over last year, while the advance had fallen to as little as 2 per cent in the east.

Steel production slumped to a new low for the year, the movement of freight declined, and electric power production, while registering a small gain, was up less than seasonally. Industrial gains in the last week have not been entirely lacking, however, for scattered reports of quickened operations came from makers of paper and paper products, typewriters, rubber goods, metal containers, chemicals, and other miscellaneous lines. Relative quiet prevails in the textile industries, but shoe factories are planning higher schedules for the immediate future.

Await Housing Drive.

The building lines are awaiting results of the opening of the federal home renovation drive with high hopes. Some large dealers in building supplies report a pickup in business. Residential construction in July declined substantially, so the renovation drive comes at a time when it is needed to rescue the home building lines from the doldrums.

The slump in the steel industry has been intensified. Steel estimates last week's operations at only 21½ per cent of capacity, off 6 points from the previous week. "Scanning the immediate horizon," this survey says "steelmakers can see only prospects for additional government work and some revival in automobile requirements."

Automobile production, as estimated by Cram, declined only 3,685 units last week to a total of 53,854 units. This brought it down to last year's level, however, which for the same week was 53,920.

The weekly freight report showed a drop of 1.4 per cent from the previous week.

CHICAGO TAKES NATION'S LEAD IN AIR CONDITIONING

Mr. Wantz based his statement on figures of the Commonwealth Edison company which show a total of 446 units amounting to 39,551 fan pump refrigerator horse power. It is stated that 44 units were installed during July, a record breaking achievement that is attributed to the extremely hot weather. Eighteen units were installed during the first half of August.

Of the total units in Chicago the largest number are in private offices with 114. Other groups are: restaurants, 87; theaters, 68; general offices and buildings, 43; residences 42; candy factories, 23; clothing and shoe stores, 22; hotels, 18; bakeries, 17, and printing establishments, 17. The total does not include 40 units at the A Century of Progress.

Mr. Wantz said air conditioning may be the new lively infant industry that will restore industrial prosperity to the United States, affording an important market for machinery, copper, zinc, tin plate, sheet metal, insulation, and various other materials.

"It employs cotton and rubber workers, steamfitters, plumbers, plasterers, sheet metal workers, carpenters, painters, electricians, and laborers," he added. "It furnishes work for architects, engineers, transportation employés, salesmen, and other employés in the industries involved."

He stressed the benefits of air conditioning in accelerating American industry, reducing unemployment and putting more energy, comfort, and health into industry and general living conditions.

TRUCK TRAIN PLAN SUCCESS, OFFICIALS SAY

Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—The truck train freight service from Chicago to Bloomington by way of Peoria, started by the Keeshin Motor Express company of Chicago Tuesday, has proved a successful method of overnight delivery, officials said today. The volume of business indicates that direct service between Chicago and Bloomington may be installed soon.

Two motor truck trailers are put on each flat car at the Rock Island freight house in Chicago at 8 p. m. daily, and hauled by rail to Peoria. Two flat cars have been required each day so far, one delivering two trailers with freight for the Peoria district and the other trucks for movement to Bloomington by way of Washington, Eureka and El Paso.

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

CHERBOURG, Aug. 19.—The first silver shipment from France to the United States since the American nationalization of silver went forward on the Aquitania from this port today. The shipment included four cases of silver, one of nickel, and one of bronze, and was made for the Banque de Paris et Pays Bas. It was consigned to the Central Hanover Bank and Trust company of New York.

SILVER FLURRY FADES, INFLATION TALK SUBSIDES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—The silver flurry has largely subsided, it having been established that there is no intention on the part of the treasury at this time to accompany the acquisition of large stocks of silver under the nationalization program and by other purchasers provided for in the silver purchase act, with large scale currency inflation.

The present policy is to issue silver certificates against the metal thus taken over only in an amount equal to the cost price of the bullion, and, while no official pronouncement has been made as to the future, all indications are that the purpose is to adhere to such a policy for an indefinite period.

Announcement of the nationalization of silver on Aug. 9 was followed the next day by a statement by the treasury that certificates would be issued up to the full monetary value of $1.29 per ounce against all free silver held by it up to June 14, five days before the approval of the silver purchase act.

Policy of Treasury.

While the treasury stated that this policy would affect only 62,000,000 ounces of silver, against which about $80,000,000 certificates would be issued, and that the step was being taken to clear the deck for inauguration of the broader program of the silver purchase act, it apparently was interpreted rather widely as an inflationary move of consequence.

One immediate result was a sharp reaction in the quotation for government bonds in the open market, which was largely overcome, however, when official explanations were made of the administration's real purpose.

This recovery was further aided when the treasury permitted the exportation of about $1,000,000 in gold, thus publicly demonstrating that it was prepared to make good its promise that it would sell as well as buy gold in maintaining the dollar at its new parity. This act served to quiet rumors that further devaluation of the gold content of the dollar might soon be proclaimed.

Provision of Act.

The silver purchase act, approved June 19, declared it to be the policy of the United States that the proportion of silver to gold in the nation's monetary stocks should be increased with the ultimate objective of having and maintaining one-fourth of the monetary value of such stocks in silver, authorized and directed the treasury to make purchases at home and abroad to that end, and further authorized nationalization of domestic stocks.

It also provided that there should be issued against such purchases and put into circulation certificates in the face amount of not less than the cost of all silver acquired under the act, putting it within the discretion of the treasury, however, to issue certificates to the full monetary value of $1.29 an ounce if deemed advisable. The treasury has stated definitly that its present policy will be to issue certificates only up to the cost price of the metal.

ILLINOIS HOME MODERNIZATION DRIVE TO START

Funds to modernize Illinois homes and business places will soon be flowing in large volume. This forecast was made yesterday on the volume of inquiry for loans from the state's farms and cities, made to the Federal Housing administration, which will open offices at 134 North La Salle street during the week.

In the first three days of FHA activity 49 Illinois banks joined the new loan movement, say advices to Carroll H. Sudler, district director for northern Illinois. They will make loans from $100 to $2,000 for new bathrooms, roofs, porches or other needed improvements to property. Owners will pay for these on the installment plan.

"Chicago is to have a strong voluntary committee of civic and industrial leaders to aid our work," said Mr. Sudler. "It will represent all groups and interests, working under a chairman of high ability to be named soon. The committee will direct appeals to neighborhood pride in building up a wide campaign."

The new loaning system will aid the homes or store owner with funds to paint, remodel and improve his property in appearance and value, and will aid the construction material industries and merchants by giving easy payment credit to owners. One aim is to create employment for building craftsmen now comprising the major portion of the nation's unemployment.

UTILITY REPORTS SHARP DECLINE IN NET INCOME

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 19.—The American Power and Light company reports a consolidated net income of $3,344,657 for the twelve months ended on June 30, comparing with full annual preferred dividend requirements of $9,653,585. In the preceding year the net income was $6,152,089.

Gross revenue in the last fiscal year was $73,798,328, against $72,240,753 in the preceding twelve months, and net earnings were $35,527,000 against $36,881,503, after expenses and taxes. For the second quarter, gross revenue was $18,293,184, against $17,397,208, and net earnings were $8,457,535, against $8,614,336.

The parent company had total income of $1,406,473 for the second quarter and $6,086,017 for the twelve months to June 30, comparing with $1,433,099 and $8,668,804, respectively, in the preceding like periods. Net income for the quarter was $579,885, against $618,638, and for the year was $2,798,202, against $5,398,765.

On June 30 the company had $16,511,899 current assets, including $12,889,762 cash, and current liabilities of $1,704,171. There is no debt due before 2016.

Minneapolis Gas Rate Reduced About 5 Per Cent

A reduction of approximately 5 per cent in gas rates will result from the action of the Minneapolis city council in approving an agreement with the Minneapolis Gas Light company, subsidiary of American Gas and Power company. The company's rates for a period of ten years will be regulated on a net return basis of $1,250,000 annually.

HAVE YOU A GENUINE AMBITION TO SUCCEED? DO YOU BELIEVE IF GIVEN A CHANCE YOU COULD OPERATE YOUR OWN BUSINESS SUCCESSFULLY?

Some men are satisfied with a steady job—being able to pay their bills and live comfortably from week to week enjoying a few of the luxuries as they come along—others with the desire for more money, more power, more prestige of public recognition. Then there are a few who do not even think about success.

Most of us dream of the day when we will be financially independent, have enough money to buy the things we long for in life—educate our children and retire with enough to keep our families comfortably when the going gets hard. However, dreams won't get you anywhere. You can't wait for somebody to put a golden opportunity in your lap—or wait for your boss to die to be advanced, or wait for that lucky break. You have to make your own breaks. Real success must be fought for.

How would you like to have your own business and make a comm. profit of $1,100 in four weeks as did our Mr. Morin [four consecutive weeks ending August 11th]?

Or $802.18 in four weeks by Johnson.

Also Metcalfe $912.00 in four weeks. [The incomes of all these men were made during the four weeks starting July 16th and ending August 11th].

Frank Dean—$916.00, or an average of $229.00 per week.

Wm. Metcalfe, eight straight weeks average of $199 per week, total $1,596.00.

R. Becker, eight straight weeks average of $158 per week, total $1,260.00.

C. H. Cockrill, $936.00, or an average of $233.00 per week.

The above men were dissatisfied with their former positions—they saw they were not making any headway, so they studied the various lines looking for positions that held a future. When they answered our ad most of them knew very little about selling. We thoroughly trained them, educated them to sell our product with real efficiency, and now they are well on the road to success. We establish you in a permanent business of your own, finance it, supply the capital, offer every bit of co-operation and pay you your profit weekly. We do this because the more money you make the larger our business grows, and the larger it grows the more room there is for advancement to managerial, executive and supervisory positions.

Our electric products are in a field by themselves. They are extensively used by the United States government, passed by and used by the Bureau of Standards, have to do with hygiene, health, sanitation, air-conditioning, also heating and cooling.

We give you a strict character investigation, so we can pick out the honest-to-goodness square shooters. If you are between the ages of 23 and 55, honest, clean cut, ambitious, call immediately. Talk with the men who are now with us and find out if they are happy and satisfied with their positions. They are well on the road to success and that is one of the surest roads to happiness, so don't delay. We need determined men. This is the best time to get started. There is no investment. Next week may be too late. Call, write and listen to what this business is all about at 75 E. Wacker-drive, room 1024, at 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. Ask for Mr. Welsh.
